Steel 'will resign' if he loses right to veto manifesto

the Liberal leadership if the party assembly votes next month to take away his right of veto over the contents of the general election manifesto.

Mr Steel, said to be improving by the day after suffering from depression brought on by a viral infection, plans to take no part in the assembly debate on the manifesto and other proposed changes to the Liberal constitution which are seen as further challenges to his auth-ority. He has not even decided whether to attend that debate.

But Mr Steel's friends are in no doubt that he would find it impossible to carry on if the move by grassroots activists to remove his manifesto veto were uccessful, successful.

Daventry Liberal Association, backed by the National League of Young Liberals and a grassroots organization called Campaign 83, have tabled a motion seeking to delete from the party constitution a clause in "Section KO" which save in "Section K9" which says:
"The Leader of the party shall have final authority over the content of the manifesto."

It springs from dissatisfaction among activists over the way Mr Steel drew up the joint general election manifesto with the Social Democratic Party, and the alleged failure of the manifesto to reflect party policy on defence, local government and blood sports.

They were particularly upset that it failed to make a commitment to ban deployment of cruise missiles. The Liberal assembly two years ago voted to support a ban.

Mr Steel does not oppose a proposal by three MPs, Mr Cyril Smith, Mr David Alton, and Mr Simon Hughes, for the election of deputy Leader.

Fall of 39% in Brixton muggings

By Nicholas Timmins Muggings in Brixton fell by 39 per cent in the first six months of this year, police said

The reduction was part of an overall decline of 20 per cent in crimes of violence reported in the Lambeth police district as a Commander Alex Marnoch. head of "L" District police, said the police could only guess at the reasons for the decline in the crimes which had tended to rise steadily. But he attributed them to changes in police tactics and to greater cooperation and trust between the police and the public, and described the figures as "promising and hopeful".

Since January, he said, an extra 93 officers had been patrolling the streets in the district in line with the new strategy adopted by Sir Kenneth Newman, the connissioner for the Metropolitan Police.

The CTD street crime squad had been using targeting and surveillance techniques in cooperation with the intelligence unit set up at East Dulwich Police Station which had led to the arrest of "some very active robbers". The figures show that robbery and other violent theft in Brixton - the category that covers muggings - fell from 801 in the first six months of last year to 489 in the equivalent period this year, a decline of 39 per cent. The figures show that there was some displacement of street crime to Streatham which saw 4 16 per cent increase in robbery and other violent theft and a 5 per cent rise in burglaries. But Commander Marnoch said the increase in Streatham was nowhere near the decline elsewhere. "The level of crime is still far too high" he said. "but we are going in the right direction." He said that in recent months people have been increasingly willing to come forward and help the police. They will not put up with the degree of violent crime that existed before. Older members of the comm-

Apology by US for aiding Barbie From Nicholas Ashford Washington

The United States has apologized to France for helping Klaus Barbie, the "Butcher of Lyons", to evade French justice after the Second World War. The apology coincides with the publication vesterday of a 220-page report into American complicity in the Barbie affair. The report shows that Barbie worked as a paid informant between 1947 and 1951, and that US Army officers pre-vented his extradition to France by concealing knowledge of his whereabouts from the United States Government.

It also shows that the US Army arranged his subsequent flight to Bolivia where he lived for the next 33 years.

Declaring that "We have delayed justice in Lyons". Mr Allan Ryan, a senior Justice Department official who com-piled the report, said in a memorandum that "I therefore believe it appropriate...that the United States Government express to the Government of France its regret for its responsi-bility in delaying the duc process of law in the case of

The report and a mass of accompanying documents detail how Barbie was first recruited by the American Counter Intelligence Corps (CIC), and how, in the summer of 1950, CIC officers deliberately withheld information about his whereabouts to prevent his extradition to face trial on charges of war crimes. He lived in Bolivia as "Klaus Altmann" until his extradition to France last February.

The report also contains intriguing references to the intense rivalry which existed between American, British, and French intelligence services in occupied Germany during the immediate post-war cra.

Barbie had originally offered himself as an informant to the British, who were said to be 'very interested" in obtaining his services. However, Barbio turned to the Americans after allegedly being mistreated by the British following his arrest by them at the end of 1946. One document shows that the has excommunicated 12 mcm bers of its headquarters staff in Britain for misconduct, after an internal investigation prompted by the conviction and imprisonment of senior Scientologists in the United States, Several other staff in the Office of Guardians of the church in East Grinstead Sussex, have been moved to other positions. The explusion of the 13 members was recommended by Mrs Edith Buchele, the new external affairs director of the British church, after she uncovered what she described yesterday as "a complete mess." Charges against the 12 included the misuse of church funds to launch a series of libel actions, particularly against British newspapers, but also against Scotland Yard and the Department of Health and Social Security. One senior member of the staff of the Office of Guardians has falsely claimed to be a barrister. The church's policy, as defined by its founder Mr Ron Hubbard, is to use legal means only as a last resort but above all to live at peace with one's environment". Mrs Buchele said.

The office, which at one point had a staff of about forty, was closed earlier this year when the last expulsion happened. The international headquarters of the church has now been transferred from East Grinstead to Los Angeles.

A new open policy has been adopted by the church in Britain, which has hitherto been noted for its secrecy. Yesterday The Times was allowed free access to any part of the complex of church buildings at St Hill Manor. East Grinstead.

Mr Joshua Nkomo came home yesterday to a reception which was in stark contrast to the last time he returned from exile, Less than 100 supporters gathered at the airport to chant and sing on his arrival after five months in Britain, compared with an estimated 120,000 who welcomed him back in January,

Mr Nkomo, who expressed his delight at being home, said his first public task would be to appear in Parliament today to challenge a motion by the ruling Zanu (PF) Party to have his seat declared vacant.

Emphatic message: Mr Arens stating his Government's position loud and clear in Beirut.

Israel gives Lebanon America policy, his main foreign affairs preoccupation. Mr John Glenn, leading conunwritten ultimatum tender for the Democratic presidential nomination, ap-Professor Moshe Areas flew into Beirut yesterday with a message for President Gemayel of Lebanon. The Israeli De-fence Minister did not meet the Lebanese leader, nor did he carry a written ultimatum.

The message, however, was loud and clear. Start negotiating now between the rival Christian and Druze militias in the Choof mountains - because the Israelis are about to withdraw even if the two sides have not stopped fighting.

Mr Arens delivered his most stringent comments at a press conference at Yarse, warning the Syrians not to attack the Israeli Army in the Bekan valley and disclaiming any Israeli responsibility for the continuing savagery in the Israeli-occupied Chouf.

Then he and his advisers went to east Beirut, reportedly for talks with Mr Fadi Frem, the commander of the Christian Phalangist militia. The visit must have concentrated a few minds in the offices of the Lebanese Cabinet half a mile

All Mr Arens could offer the Lebanese Government was an assurance that Israel intended to withdraw from the whole of Lebanon and that the redeployment of the Israeli Army along the Awali River was "only part of that total withdrawal".

Reading from a prepared text, he added: "It is our firm desire to see a strong central government restoring its auth-ority over the whole of Leba-non... it is Syria which is doing everything to prevent the total evacuation of all foreign forces from this country. Mr Arens said that the Israeli Army would do all it could to ensure a peaceful handover of the Chouf to the Lebanese Army but there was no doubt about what was on his

"The Lebanese Government," he said, "should be putting greater emphasis on trying to reach a political dation between Christian and Druze communities in the Chouf and coordinating the future redeployment of the Lebanese Army units with us in the light of our planned evacuation of the area... We cannot make the movement of our troops contingent on arrangements that may or may not be made in the area."

By far his harshest words were reserved for the Syrians. President Assad, he said, was a dictator. "Like many dictators in the world past and present (he) is intent on military confrontations in order to strengthen his position at home. We had that kind of experience before with the Syrians so I would not rule out the possibility that the Syrians would be looking for a military

He added: "I assure you they would be beaten very soundly if there was to be a new confrontation between the Isrueli and Syrian armies. Meanwhile, Beirut airport reopened yesterday to commercial airliners after being closed for six days.

Insurgents pound Kabul fortress

Islamabad (Reuter) - Afghan guerrillas staged a five-hour attack at the weekend on a Soviet-manned fortress overlooking Kabul, Western diplomats said here yesterday.

They quoted their embassies as saying the attack, which lasted late into Saturday night, was one of the largest seen in the capital since the Soviet intervention in 1979.

The guerrillas also pounded the Radio Afghanistan building and the Mikrorayon residential complex, where many Soviet officials and Afghan Communist leaders live, they said.

The diplomats had no reports of casualties in the Bala Hissar fortress, which was hit by mortar and rocket fire from three separate points in the city, but they said smoke was still rising from the thick-walled compound on Sunday morning. During the shelling, alghan troops beamed spotlights and fired tracer bullets at guerrilla casualties in Mikrorayon, where blocks of flats and local security police headquarters were also targets. Radio Afghanistan was hit by morter fire, but did not appear much damaged. The diplomats said travellers arriving from the south were subject to frequent searches and

The RDM; as it is known, is running at a huge loss and there has been growing speculation that it would be forced to close or abandon its intensely politifinancial daily. Mr Clive Kinsley, managing director of the newspaper group, said in a statement published on the front page yesterday: "The closure of the Mail is not an option it (the board) will consider. But he also announced that from October 4 its business news section would be carried in a separate supplement and that "refinements" would be introduced gradually to the general news pages. The Mail, with an audited circulation of 118,000 copies a day, is facing stiff competition from The Citizen, the newspaper laun-ched with secret funds by the now defunct Department of Information to counter the Mail's vigorous anti-apartheid

The Citizen has steadily closed on the Mail and has as audited circulation of 72,000 copies daily, claiming to have a higher percentage of white readers. The Mail, published a special edition for blacks which The Citizen claims accounts for half its daily circulation. Mr Kinsley's statement indicates that the Mail will continue to cater specially for its black readers despite arguments that a large black readership discourages advertisers who feel the best returns are still to be found among higher income whites.

The assurance that the Mail will not change its character will also be a comfort to the official opposition, the Progressive Federal Party which the newspaper has championed since its inception, South African Associated Newspapers yesterday reported a 39 percent drop in earnings for the first six months of the year and said that the Mail would record "a heavy loss" this year and next.

Trevor Fishlock reports on his struggle

You're not doing so good now, Ed

It is very hot in Harlem, even hotter in this second-floor room where bodies are packed closely together, squirming, wet-shirted and as sticky as fudge. Someone pleads into a microphone: Cool it, brothers and sisters, cool it." Everyone is straining for a glimpse of the Chief New Yorker, Mayor Edward Koch. He's there in the thicket of cameras, lights and stick mikes. The people, mostly black, want to hear what he has to say and to make their own feelings known. They think Mayor Koch has some explaining to do.

But it is no good. There are too many people, too much noise. A crowd clamours outside, feeling cheated and saying the affair is a sham.

This is a congressional inquiry and the mayor is here with senior policemen to defend the city's police against allegations that they have a down on blacks and Puerto Ricans and handle them roughly. But the second layer of the matter is that the mayor's own racial and class attitudes are under scrutiny - and, by extension, so is the way he runs this monstrous and marvellous imperial capital.

"The mayor is the biggest man in town, the guy who sets the tone", a black subway worker says. "and as far as we're concerned the tone around here is not good.'

The hearing has to be postponed to another day, to be moved to a larger room. The mayor is boosed as he climbs into his car and people bang their fists on the bonnet. The mayor is not a man to be intimidated: he can stand the heat in the kitchen. But his natural ebullience is muted and he looks pensive. This is no time for his famous catchphrase: "How'm I doing?"

He calls out those words all the time as he ranges New York, the bestknown face in the city. It is also the title of a published collection of his aphorisms. "You're doing fine, Ed", the people usually shout back. Sometimes he answers the questions himself - "How'm I doing? Terrific!" - for Mr Koch fakes nothing, certainly not modesty. But in Harlem on this steamy day the answer to "How'm I doing?" would have to be: "Not so good, Ed."

The racial question has always been in the background of his six-year mayoralty. Many blacks and Hispanics think him unsympathetic to their difficulties: unemployment, poor housing. inadequate services, Rachmanism and diminished hope. Many white liberals agree with them. There is a perception that the Koch Raj favours the middle class and that it is, at least partly, responsible for developments changing New York, particularly the crowded golden core, the island of Manhattan, mainspring of finance, business, art and creative endeavour.

What is happening is that the young and well-off are steadily colonizing areas once cheap and lower middleclass. Even on the dismal Lower East Side, where trembling marionettes of junkies buy their drugs, there are the beginnings of change.

In the centre of this rumbling conflict stands Mayor Koch. popular with the majority, assertive, flamboy-ant and an unashamed champion of the middle class.

office in City Hall. "I believe in middle-class values, the work ethic, the myself once.' revulsion against crime. From my first day in office I have said there is nothing wrong with being middle class. The middle class pays the taxes and provides the jobs which provide the services for the poor. Stomp on the middle class and it will leave.

Carol Bellamy: sparring partner

Mayor Koch looking down from the steps of his power house

"But it's baloney to say I discriminate. Twenty-six per cent of the people here are below the poverty line and get 56 per cent of the budget. No city in middle class. the country gives so much. I am "Sure I am," he said to me in his sensitive to the needs of all poor people, black or white, I was poor

Mr Koch's life has been a classic enactment of the American dream. He was born in the Bronx in 1924, the son of Polish Jewish immigrants, and knew hard times in the depression. He worked in a shoe shop to pay his way through law school, served in the army in Europe during the war and, retiring as a sergeant, started a legal career.

He entered liberal politics as a leading Greenwich Village reformer. was a civil rights worker in the deep South, opposed the Vietnam war, and was a Democrat Congressman for municipal politics and won with 48 per cent of the vote. By then his outlook had changed.

John Lindsay, one of his predecessors, made friends with rich whites and poor blacks, but had neglected the white middle class. It was to this latter group that Ed Koch made a direct appeal. He was pro-capital punishment, and called for a crackdown on crime, cuts in public spending, and an end to racial quotas. He attacked "poverticians", a word his critics construed as blacks. He is no economic wizard and was fortunate to arrive in City Hall when New York's financial crisis, the bleak November of liberal belief in free spending on services, was already being reined. He had both Democrat and Republican support when he ran again in 1981, and won with 75 per cent, the highest popularity rating of any mayor. He is a bachelor with a full-time commitment to public service, an occupation he considers noble.

He is a kind of metaphor for New York, being what many New Yorkers think they are: street-smart, abrasive, quick with a gag, confrontationist. His New York cadences are peppered with phrases like "it's outrageous" "balo-ney" and "schmuck". He runs the show and loves doing so, the best-known mayor of New York since Fiorello LaGuardia.

He gave me this assessment of himself. "I am the best salesman this Manhattan for nine years. In 1977 he city has had for a long time. Even my ran for the top job in American enemies have to agree my personality has been helpful to the city. In 1975-77 people walked around with a hangdog. He recognizes that his abrasiveness has look and we were on the edge of bankruptcy. We've restored to New partly a cheerleader. makes public all his finances).

Mr Koch is tenacious and determined and has a retentive memory for slights. He doesn't often forgive he gets even. He says he does not get ulcers because he says what he thinks: His robustness and candour have rubbed fur the wrong way.

The mayor thinks the Harlem inquiry is meant, partly, as a political stick to beat him. Chicago and Philadelphia have recently elected black mayors and many blacks think New York should have one. Although the proportion of blacks and Hispanics in New York has increased, so that whites are now 52 per cent of the population, black political influence has declined. The population of Harlem, for example, rose by a third in the 1970s, but the mayor did not compensate by putting blacks into top jobs, and this can be seen as a political

Carol Bellamy, president of the City Council since 1977, thinks the mayor's language and artitudes have created racial tension. "Mayor Koch is a smart man who wants to make the city better, and he is in many ways reasonable and fair. But his words and attitudes have created an impression that New York does not care, and his administration is not sensitive to blacks and Hispanics."

For Miss Bellamy, sharing City Hall with Mayor Koch is never dull. She is 41 years old, and, like the mayor, springs from a working-class back-ground, is a lawyer, single and a devoted, full-time public servant.

Real power lies in the executive office of mayor, not in the City Council. But to some extent the Council president is a loyal opposition, and Miss Bellamy sees her job as being part of the checks and balances of the administration. As for Mr. Koch ... "I'm his sparring partner. He's not always right and someone has to take him on. We've had our spats."

New York is not quite the city it was: a million people left it in the 1970s. For many of them the difficulties were too much to bear. Taxes are higher, but services are reduced. The place is dirtier, the city bureau-cracy is fat. The subway works, but it is old and ramshackle and, as the mayor says, "it stinks".

Mayor Koch says: "Did you know that Mass is said in 23 languages in this city? It's the diversity that makes it electric, that gives it a special intelligence, makes you think faster, walk laster, talk faster."

It is this diversity, of course, that helps to make the mayor's the toughest of jobs. Mr Koch says, in a politician's phrase, that he wants the poor to make it into the middle class (just as he did). But many of the poor are so far behind that they have difficulty getting on to the first rung.

The other day the mayor inaugur-ated a housing scheme for low-income people and got on well with the crowd of black people there. "Some people are trying to come between us", he told them. "Don't let them."

It was a serious Ed Koch speaking upset people and can damage him politically. And he is contemplating the value of a more conciliatory into the police has made Ed Koch (His salary is £73,000 a year and he ponder on the task of running his astonishing metropolis.

The shattering of a dream

At about 4 o'clock in the morning Fitz woke me. We washed quickly and sat for a few minutes drinking coffee, gearing ourselves up for the day ahead. I was feeling absolutely drained. For the past two years I had thought of little but this day and now it had arrived. We returned to the shop at about security guards were padding through the deserted floors. There was nothing we could do except check the cleaning once again and hope that the sales girls would arrive on time. By 8 o'clock the exhausted manageresses had dragged themselves back in and the first trickle of other staff began. As opening hour approached Fitz and I did a last check of the floors. Everything was immaculate. Behind each counter and till stood a nervously expectant girl. We were ready to go. We went down to the ground floor where the security guards were waiting to open the To our dismay we discovered that we had visitors. The directors of Dorothy Perkins, whom we had not seen for the past year while we were wrestling with the problems of the new store, were all there in their pinstripe suits. Not only that, but Mrs Roxburgh, the wife of one of them, came too, with straw hat and white gloves. She looked as if she was going to stand at the door greeting the customers.

When the doors opened, there was instant pandemonium. Almost immediately the tills were clattering and by the time we had retreated to the fifth floor, five minutes later, there was already a crowd around the snack har

Feeling slightly dazed, we headed for Fitz's office. We were both tired out and wanted a few moments' peace. Seated at Fitz's desk was David Roxburgh, in high spirits, heroically explaining on the tele-phone to the Financial Times how he had performed to get the store open. Seated beside him in the only other chair was his wife. They looked at us as if we were intruders. Leaving them to it, we wandered back to the crowded sales floors.

Abridged from From A to Biba by Barbara Hulanicki, published by Hutchinson on September 5, price

Two years of planning and months of hard labour had turned the art deco department store that had been Derry and Toms into Big Biba. But even before the new venture opened, late in 1973, Barbara Hulanicki and her husband, Stephen Fitz-Simon, sensed the growing threat from the directors of British Land, the property company which now controlled the Biba enterprise. The six that morning. The first of the subsequent struggle is described in the final extract from her cooks were already at work and the forthcoming antabiography. From A to Biba.

But we were not to escape that easily from the self-appointed hero of the hour. About an hour later I back to Fitz's office, where the Roxburghs had made themselves thoroughly at home. A waiter had just been diverted from the frantically busy restaurant to supply really degrading about having to sit in front of your own desk in your own office listening to someone sitting in your place.

For the first six weeks everything ran like clockwork. All the departments were selling over their forecast figures, new stock was flowing in, and we were starting to relax. There is something working week of early 1974. At the same time the property market collapsed and the British Land couraged and the British Land share price started to crumble. Biba's sales, along with everyone else's, were badly hit and suddenly the complaints started to come pouring in. It seemed that every time John Ritblatt went on a social visit he would meet somebody who had something detrimental to say.

By Christmas 1974, things were starting to look up again. The sales returned to their proper level and we were catching up on the ground lost during the strike, but the suggestions. We agreed that there was not enough information to the public in the shop. We would have "Pay Here" signs and "Cash Desk" signs, but we wanted these done in a way that was right for the feel of the shop. To me it meant we could introduce neon all over the store, hich had not been used since the 1950s, and I quite liked the idea. It was all agreed at the meeting, but Rithlatt and his merry men had no intention of allowing us any involvement. Next day a lorry arrived full of Tesco-like white light boxes to be put up all over the store. I felt sick. Very early in the morning before anyone arrived I went and jumped up and down on the whole lot. There wasn't one bit

It was time for me to go. I couldn't watch the destruction of that beautiful building. It was dreadful to feel so powerless. They could have it. As my parting gesture I ordered 5,000 fluorescent plastic buckets for the use of the ground floor. Let them work that one out, I

Against my better judgment I was inveigled into one last meeting with the entire Dorothy Perkins board. What were they trying to do? Why couldn't they let me go? Roxburgh flaunted my contract in my face. We had two more years to go and after that we couldn't open a shop within 50 miles of London.

All this time Fitz had been trying to raise finance to buy our business back. We couldn't have picked a worse time than the mid-1970s, with rising inflation. Most of the merchant banks had been pinched by the collapse of the property market, and London was full of exmillionaires and people who knew

We came so close to doing a deal with British Land that after several weeks of hard negotiation Fitz set off late one afternoon for the final meeting when the contracts would be signed. There were several solicitors and other experts in the room and at literally the last moment a technicality arose that made the deal impossible. When Fitz returned that night we knew to ask. Before we open a new shop Rithlatt. We tried to present a well-that time was running out. Fitz always writes down his sales reasoned case and listen to his side, carried on for a while but I bowed

It really hurt ... I still feel it today

Finally British Land decided that they and their acolytes could no longer run Big Biba. They decided to auction off the entire interior. Fitz and I were amazed at the interest of both private collectors and museums. Later the assistant curator of the Museum of Modern Art in New York told me how sad he had been that he had no money left at the time to buy anything for the museum. Oddly, it cheered us tremendously to think that so many of our things would find a good home where they would be

Meanwhile, Fitz was trying to save the Biba name. It had become obvious that it was impossible for us to buy the building, but Fitz had found a man who controlled a small public company and who wanted to be our partner. We negotiated with British Land to buy the thriving cosmetics company and all the Riba trade marks. The price was agreed and our new partners were ready with their money.

We had new premises earmarked and we were waiting for the contracts to be prepared, but our

The wages of son is Darth

First the bad news: my daughter, having attained the age of five, reckons she is now in line for pocket money, and opens the talks with a rock-solid bargaining posture: "Eighty quid a day." Now the worse news: one of her birthday presents was a (vpewriter, and even as I

At last the good news: my daughter has discovered - I don't know where - a bottomicss source of revenue. It is called The Junior Mint. You simply feed a blank paper between the cylinders and out comes a £50 note. It reminds me of those Elliston Novelty bargains of my own youth

Better news yet: she has completed her first column, which I here quote in jult: "Deer gyles pleeze come to mye partee nest yere". It has a certain frankness, I agree, but if that's 800 words, then I'm Joanna Lumber.

Still better: the Rillington Junior International has broken. The tiny tape, through which she has drubbed all manner of seditious prose, is sundered from the reel, and I cannot, in all honesty, fix the thing. She is "going up to The Times to complain".

Menio to Charles Douglas-Home:

The Junior Mint has arrived. I was expecting it to land with the portentous thud of new plant, but the thing has fluttered down on to the mat with the rest of the final demands. Before you can say treasury forecast my daughter is creating wealth at the breakfast table. The rival claimant wants a slice of the action, and a terrible fight ensues. There is milk and All-Bran all over the carpet. John Wayne would have approved.

Tremendous projections for spending in the public (ie, family) sector, starting with a major lido on the site of the old compost heap and a loft conversion to house "the next five helpies"

A painful lesson on economics - but who is teaching whom, and who is learning what? My daughter has, quite simply, acquired the means of production and intends to capitalize on the produce. I am tempted to embark on a bit of theory and say that this is not what Mr Friedman means by money supply. But there loom the shapes of M3, PSBR and the other impenetrables of that linguistic landscape, stranger by far than most toddlerite patois. The real clincher is the state of the notes. They are grey, smudgy efforts, tissue-thin and not a third of the requisite size. In one corner is a thing that looks more like a thumbprint than a monarch's head. I think they would stand a fair chance in a bank of blind and handless tellers.

A positive approach

Cancer is a disease that strikes fear into the hearts of everyone Annette Gartland met one woman who is fighting it . . . and winning

Lynne Pemberton was told last winter that she had cancer of the cervix - the neck of the womb. This January she underwent a radical Wertheim's hysterectomy where the uterus, cervix, ovaries. fallopian tubes and lymph nodes in the area are removed. She hopes that relating her experience, and feelings, might help other women struck by the "The cancer sufferers you hear about are generally very optimistic and positive," she says. "At times I am, but I find it very difficult. I tend to be rather introspective and pessimistic, which colours my feelings about the future." Lynne's fear that she might have cancer began when a routine smear test last summer revealed an abnormality in cervical cells, and she was referred for further examination. This showed the need for a cone biopsy a method of coring out cervical tissue for testing, which may totally remove the changing cells.

Lynne, who is 33 and lives in Kingston Surrey, was frightened about going into hospital and worried that she might not come safely through the operation. But she did think that the operation would be the end of the story, that nothing more serious would be found. But on her birthday, the hospital gynaecologist telephoned to explain as gently as possible that she had a "real cancer" and would lose her uterus.

1 was completely numb. Before the 'phone went down I was in tears and sure I was going to die. The first thing I thought of was, I can't have children. The fact that it was cancer probably hit me about 30 seconds

Her husband, Trevor, was also devastated. "We didn't talk about it in any reasonable way. We were too busy trying to comfort each other, just trying to let it sink in", Lynne said. "The gynaecologist explained that my situation was unusual. He said that cancerous cells were normally on the surface of the normally on the surface of the cervix, or took the line of least resistance towards the outside. In my case they appeared to have gone the other way, actually in towards a more muscular area. The cone biopsy hadn't gone deep enough. He didn't believe it until he looked through the microscope himself." Concerned that she would need so much time off work, Lynne offered to leave her job with an architects'

practice in Richmond, Surrey. The partners refused to accept her resignation and suggested that she should work when she could.

"It is silly, but you think 'I've always been healthy, not terribly fit but eating sensibly, not overdoing anything, not drinking too much, so why should it be me? Every few days I would suddenly think 'I'm dreaming. I'll wake up to find this isn't happening'."
Lynne had radiotherapy twice before the hysterectomy - an uncomfortable experience, but not frightening because it was so well explained. The worst part was when capsules of cesium which had been implanted under general anaesthetic and left in place for about 22 hours, were removed. She laughs, recalling the nurses extracting what seemed like miles of wadding. She also had a lymphogram, which checks on any spread of cancer to the lymph system.

The lymphogram was clear - her first good news in months.

Between radiotherapy sessions, Lynne pushed herself to take her final professional examination in architecture. "It was a very trau-matic time. Until the week before, I thought I would drop out." She and Trevor also decided to marry after living together for nine years, feeling that they could support each other better. Going into hospital for the hysterectomy. Lynne felt very frightened - about the pain and

She had expected to suffer quite severe, sharp pain afterwards. In fact, she experienced discomfort when moved and felt extremely bloated. She is glad to have declined her boss's offer to help pay for private treatment, which would have meent being in a more along have meant being in a room alone. The "tremendous" atmosphere in the Kingston Hospital ward helped. "I don't think I'd laughed so much in years. We all knew the most intimate details about each other and managed to laugh about almost everything that happened."

For about six weeks after the operation, movement was painful and slow, and Lynne was extremely tired. She mostly "marched up and down, drank water and slept". It must be hell, she says, for women with children to look after.

Lynne now receives harmone therapy, as the removal of ovaries ends the natural supply. She is distressed by the fact that she cannot

"Even though they've given me the maximum possible chance of nothing else happening. I'm not really convinced. I have to tell myself that I'm likely to be around in 20 years time,"

Lynne felt that everyone who dealt with, or looked after her was really wonderful". She felt well-informed. But she believes there could have been more explanation about the physical reaction to a hysterectomy and perhaps some printed information about the operation. There could also have been more advice about life in the

From Rosemary Stephens, Albert Road, Clevedon, Avon The letter from Helen Signy (Friday Page July 29) reminds me of an occasion some years ago in West Africa, when I was invited to visit an exhibition on diesetics.

Illustrations for the different stands had been culled from various sources and included one of then current advertisements for, I think, Abdullah cigarettes, showing a group of sylph like men and women in eventing dress. The captain read: You see these people? They are lean and ugly through not taking enough carbohydrate."

How screen tests can save lives

Cervical cancer kills more than 2,000 women in Britain each year. Older women are more at risk as the disease usually takes seven to ten years, or more, to develop. But over the past decade the number of women under 35 dying each year from cervical cancer has doubled to more than 170. It is not the most common gynaecological cancer, however. Cancer of the ovaries kills twice as many women. And, by comparison, 12,000 women die in Britain each year from breast cancer. Cervical cancer counts for four per cent of all cancers in women. In 1978 there were more than 4,000 new cases in Women who have intercourse when they are young, have many sexual partners or multiple venereal infections have a high risk of contracting cervical cancer. There is also evidence that there are high-risk males, according to Dr Dulcie Coleman, consultant cytopathologist at St Mary's Hospital in London. Partners of women with cervical cancer often had other partners who developed the disease.

More than two million cervical smear tests are performed in Britain each year, but screening has failed to reduce mortality. Dr Coleman cites the error rate in the test itself as one In areas such as Iceland and

British Columbia in Canada where comprehensive screening takes place, the incidence of cervical cancer has been considerably reduced. In Finland, where the programme reaches 90 per cent of women between 30 and 59, cases of cervical cancer have halved. In Norway, where there is no national screening programme, incidence has increased by 15 per cent since 1965.

Alice Burns, health programmes organizer for the Women's National ancer Control Campaign, said: 'Any sexually active woman should have smear tests every three to five

Pre-malignant changes in the cervix are detected in about 1.5 per thousand women in Britain, A positive smear test, however, does not necessarily mean cancer, but that some cells are changing or have changed. The test is intended to pick up any abnormality. When pre-between cervical cancer and herpes. And scientists have discovered an association between genital warts and the cancer, British research has shown the DNA of a genital wart virus present in 58 per cent of patients with pre-malignant lesions of the cervix. There are, however, arguments that the wart viruses are not directly involved but merely passengers in cancer cells.

Will the great survivor do a deal?

Joshua Nkomo's third and shortest political exile has ended in return to his native Zimbabwe and to a series of political and personal problems which are no more resolved than when he fled across a remote stretch of the Botswana border in March.

Now, as then, Mr Nkomo's Patriotic Front party stands accused of fomenting insurrection in the troubled western province of Matabeleland. The rift between his supporters and those of Robert Mugabe, the Prime Minister, is as wide as ever. Nothing visible has been done to put the poor personal relations between the two men on a level of better understanding, and possible police charges which Mr Nkomo believed were a threat to his liberty are still on file.

At the time he fled Zimbabwe he had been questioned by police about his allegations that government forces, motivated by political and tribal antagonism, had in January and February systematically slaughtered Ndebele peasants in the terrority which makes up Mr Nkomo's political power base. Although that claim has since been widely echoed by church and voluntary organizations it was indicated then that Mr Nkomo might be charged under the Law and Order Maintenance Act with bringing the authorities into disrepute. It is difficult to imagine a As Joshua Nkomo faces the Zimbabwe parliament after his return from self-imposed exile in Britain, Stephen Taylor asks if he will now allow Robert Mugabe his one-party state

It must be highly questionable whether the elder statesman of Zimbabwean nationalism, who turned 66 in exile - and appears to have added pounds to his portly frame in London - has the energy or will to contribute much to further political developments.

There is some acceptance, even in Zimbabwe now, that Mr Nkomo has no control of the Matabeleland guerrillas whose cause the govern-ment has accused him of secretly sponsoring. In fact Mr Nkomo is rejected as a "sell out" by those who have taken up arms, however haphazardly, in the cause of Ndebele nationalism and there is probably no individual who could call in the guerrillas from the bush. Dumiso Dabengwa, a former Zipra commander acquitted of treason in April, is sometimes mentioned in such a role, but the martyrdom he has gained among the rebels because of his continued detention would soon evaporate if he cooperated with

Why the Hungarian success story is not for export

To be Hungarian is to be a member of a secret society, a central European freemasonry protected from intruders by a language as obscure as anything heard in Babel. Budapest intellectuals brag that the most efficient organized crime network in New York is run not by Sigilians but he Husserians Sicilians but by Hungarians: no undercover agent, no enterprising G-man can penetrate the scramble

Yet, with the persistence of pilgrims, planners from other communist states - from Warsaw to Peking - have been trying to decipher the secrets embedded in the Hungarian success story. Does market socialism work? Is it possible to satisfy consumers without weakening communist control? Is the Hungarian model exportable? Will economic reforms snowball into a political liberalization movement? The shops are the message: those in the centre of Budapest bristle with stereo sets, meat, fresh fruit. There is a Parisian sense of style, a Swiss reverence for money earned and not a single glory-to-Lenin and let's-build-socialism banner to be seen.

A Chinese team has been here to quiz the institutes (the result: the stars of the Peking Opera have agreed to accept lower salaries in return for a slice of box office bered as the Soviet ambassador to Budapest in 1956 when his country's tanks rolled into town) is experimenting with industrial reforms that smack of the Hungarian model. The Poles see Hungary as the correct direction for their own attempts to decentralize the economy and even the Czechs are looking over the fence, enviously monitoring their neighbours. Almost by default, Hungary has become the showcase of the communist block.

Economic reform - the broad label for less planning, greater focus on the market - has been the subject of debate for decades, notably by Polish economic philosophers such as Oskar Lange. In Prague the call was taken up briefly by economists such as Ota Sik who believed that there could be a third way between the uncertainties of the market (unemployment, the neglect of the workers) and the inertia of central planners. Hungary was the only country to follow through.

It began tentatively after the 1956 uprising against the Russians. In 1957 profit-sharing was established, compulsory delivery quotas in agriculture were abolished and industry was relieved of the need to submit monthly reports to higher authorities. Over the next years, workers' rights to share in factory profits were expanded and formalized and in 1968 the Hungarian leadership introduced the New Economic Mechanism. This shifted power from the centre to individual factory managers. Investment de-cisions to a large degree were left up to the factories, the right to trade on an individual basis with the West was established, as was the right to retain a large part of profit. Smallscale private enterprise was encouraged (workers are allowed to lease part of their factory space to produce goods after hours that can be sold privately) and prices were designed to move up and down to reflect relative scarcity.

The model has done much of what it set out to do: growth rates increased steadily, the standard of living was high and Hungary was regarded as a useful partner by many countries in the West. It became a member of the International Monetary Fund, the World Bank and other capitalist clubs. But to make a socialist economy sensitive not only to domestic but also western customers entails a degree of vulnerability to international trends. The western recession has hit Hungary - shown above all by its liquidity crisis last year - and it is suffering from flagging demand for its industrial exports, lower prices for its food exports, energy shortfalls, debt servicing difficulties and a growth in national income this year that will be scarcely enough to cover the losses in foreign trade. Yet none of these problems invalidates the Hungarian reform: on the contrary they have shown its strength. Inflation, for example, is about seven per cent, but unemployment is still manageable. So far the vices of the West have been kept at

But to transfer the Hungarian

Well fed, well dressed, Saturday shoppers in Budapest, the communist capital with a Parisian sense of style is a dangerous business. What appear to be minor flaws in the malleable Hungarian system may well be magnified a hundredfold when the methods are adopted, say, by Poland. Hungary has an efficient agriculture, can feed itself: this still cannot be said of most communist countries. It has no tradition of worker unrest in the manner of Solidarity, its Catholic Church is not a platform of criticism, its leader, Janos Kadar, has no clear rival. Hungary is not China: its bour-geoisie has never really gone away, its mercantile instincts have never been repressed, not even in the darkest Stalinist years, But there is one more reason why other communist states should think twice about grasping at the straw of the Hungarian model. The Hungarians have understood that economic and political reform are inseparable: now, slowly and timidly, they are trying to change their political structures to align them with the economic climate. The Hungarians have strengthened their trades unions (which now have the veto right over measures directly affecting workers), will introduce a greater degree of choice in local elections (without, they hope, weakening Party control). strengthen the importance of their parliament. The formal changes may be accompanied by informal changes - above all greater freedom

Hungary can, after 15 years of economic reform, afford to risk a further political relaxation. But can Moscow? Can Prague? There the formula seems to be that of cautious edging towards economic change .but keeping tight ideological control on the country lest something nasty creep out of the wood shed. In the Kremlin it may well seem that economic reform plus political repression adds up to orderly change. In Budapest they know that this is not so: reform tempered by repression is a contradiction in terms, a recipe only for further stagnation and factional infighting. In a modest, gentle sort of way the Hungarians explain this to their fraternal visitors, but the language of market socialism, like that of Hungarian, is a difficult one for orthodox Marxists.

Bernard Levin at Bayreuth, part 2

A sand-blast and polish by a master

Why do we do it? That was the question I asked yesterday, at considerable length, in discussing the new Ring at Bayreuth, conducted by Georg Solti and directed by Peter Hall. Why do we put up with the discomfort, the expense, the monomania all round us, the frightful drivel in the programme-book (this year's coveted Gibberish Prize was won effortlessly by Claude Levi-Strauss - how did that man acquire a reputation even in our gullible age?), the monstrous de-mands made upon our time and

We do it for the music, on which we are drunk, hopelessly drunk, from the first intimation of the Rhine as the E flat steals out into the darkness to the final moment, a week later, as the Redemption theme spreads its healing wings in benediction over a world made anew by love. Yesterday, I concentrated on Peter Hall's direction and William Dudley's settings; today I must hail Solti's triumph in the pit. (A pit indeed; during the Siegfried of the first cycle, the temperature beneath the wooden shell that covers the orchestra touched 111 degrees.) Disaster is inevitable in all productions of Wagner; there is no such thing as an understudy, because if you can remember some of the words and sing most of the notes in more or less the right key you can write your own contract anywhere in the world, and this production was horribly beset. From the new Siegfried, Rainer Goldberg, much was expected; he was said to have the true Heldentenor voice, and had been preparing for his ordeal for nearly three years. Alas, at the final, public, dress rehearsal he went to Manfred Jung. The trouble with Jung is the same as the trouble with Siegmund Nimsgern, the chosen Wotan; we know the furthest inch of which they are capable, and there was no chance that either would astound us, as Hildegarde Behrens did with her Brünnhilde. So the search continues for the two other legs of the tripod on which every Ring must stand, and it is a measure of the plight in which Wagner conductors live that among the names being bandled about for Siegfried was Placido Domingo; why, if I had offered to sing the part myself I could have found a dozen people willing to put me on their list before the end of the interval.

In adddition to Behrens, who sang tone that made it difficult to believe that this was her first Ring, there were only two really outstanding voices: Auge Haugland as Hagen and Jeannine Altmeyer as Sieglinde, proxime accessit for a future Brünnhilde herself. Not enough; all now rested on Soiti's shoulders.

His reading was fast (at the end of Act I of Götterdämmerung I thought my watch must have stopped, for he took only I hr 50 mins, which may be a record), yet although it was full of intensity and force it never seemed hurried, so perfectly paced was it. The spring of nervous energy in Solti's Wagner is now completely flexible, a servant not a master, and the consequence is that it is impossible to imagine better conducting in the Ring that he has given us here, or for that matter better playing than he succeeded in drawing from the invisible of the sword, the murder of Siegfried often do, like separate bits of washing on a line; the great span of have in Bayreuth. Solti's conception held everything in place, everything balanced, every-thing organic. And he knew when to slow down; the invocation to the unborn hero as Wotan leaves the fire was echoed by the trombones with majestic deliberation, and "Rube, Rube, du Gott" was like the placing in position of the final stone of a It is impossible, I know, to convince anyone who does not love

Wagner's music that it is lovable; either you feel that when you hear it, or it is not for you. I travelled to Salzburg with my friend Count Alois von Vorsicht-Stufe, for instance; the Count is a passionate and profoundly knowledgeable Mozartian, but he declined all suggestions that he should come on to Bayreuth with me. To change his mind, I played him a bit on the way; he listened attentively for about a quarter of an hour, then said in measured tones "It's all very interesting, but when does the music start?" It is useless to talk, in these circumstances, of the unbroken thread of melody, of the orchestra as the chief voice, of the way in which the themes are continuously transformed; we know what secret it is that the others do not share. I told the Count, when he begged me to explain to him just what it was that I got out of Wagner that it was as though every bit of my mind, my body, my psyche and my soul had been unscrewed, sand-blasted, polished for 36 hours, bathed in the most expensive eau de cologne, but together again and gift-

> The greatest coup was in the final bars of Die Walkure. For Act III, Hall and Dudley had reverted to the tilting platform that has un-fortunately become standard for productions of the Ring in recent years. (The Valkyrie sisters had to be anchored when it swung vertically, and Brunnhilde, poor girl, was at one point strapped upside-down beneath it, waiting - for two and a half minutes - until it turned right over and allowed her to get her circulation back.) When the platform first appeared, a groan of protest seemed in order, but it was stifled on my lips, and indeed I was unable to make a sound of any kind, by what happened just before the > Wotan has laid his beloved, erring daughter to rest, and summoned Lose to guard her with fire. The ring of red is unbroken around her, and the flames that dim night's candles in the velvet darkness above her are depicted in the music, barring the way to all but the fearless hero who to awaken her. Wotan, with infinite, resigned pity and regret, strides out of the magic circle and out of the scene. And at that moment the whole platform, with the sleeping heroine clad in her finery of fire, took off like some great space-ship, and went sailing up the sky so that she might sleep, fittingly, among the stars. I knew then the quality of this Ring for all scasons, and I knew also exactly why we who love the work do so.

Marking the spot for the axe enjoying a restorative holiday. For when he returns to work next month he will need to have his faculties and resilience about him. Early autumn, the season of the public spending review, is always the climax of the Chief. Secretary's year, and 1983 promises to be as tough as any.

Last week Lord Carrington denounced the Treasury's perennial search for candle-ends. "These continual percentage cuts", he told the watching world on Channel 4. "do infinitely more damage to what you are trying to do in terms of reasonable saving." The time had come, he thought, for the Treasury and the Government generally "to look at cutting out a function in government rather than cheese-paring on the things that really are

I'm sure the Treasury would say "Amen" to that. Patching together an adequate total of economies from the margins of a thousand individual programmes is not only infi-nitely more time-consuming and temper-fraying than the achieve-ment of a similar saving through the complete withdrawal of government from a handful of activities. It also given the human propensity of the Civil Service to protect its own-employment - bears disproportionately on the capital expenditure side of the accounts. Contrary to the assumption of the critics elsewhere in Whitehall, the Treasury would infinitely rather have it otherwise.

The trouble is that functions for sacrifice are not exactly volunteers. The former Foreign Secretary was particularly indignant about the economies he had been required to make in the BBC's overseas services. Would he have preferred to see the Foreign Office subsidy totally withdrawn? That would certainly have "cut out a function", but with Lord Carrington's cheerful acquiesence? I wonder. Off the cuff, I can think of only two "functions" eliminated in the last Parliament the Price Commission and exchange

Nevertheless, I am sure that Peter Rees should heed Lord Carrington's counsel - if he can. Before the holidays the Cabinet reportedly agreed in principle to hold next year's spending to the figure of £126,000m - written into Sir Geoffrey Howe's last White Paper. Even this, it is reckoned, will need £5,000m to be lopped from current departmental plans, Last year a similar agreement in principle was translated into an actual standstill with surprising ease. But on that occasion it was found possible to trim the "contingency reserve" - the central piggy bank - and to assume that departments would underspend their allocations. I rather doubt whether that trick could be turned again with easy credibility.

So where is Mr Rees to turn? One suggestion has already met with flat: the proposition that the real worth of unemployment benefit should be trimmed. This one smells of trouble

I trust that Peter Rees, Chief to me. No doubt it is true that the Secretary to the Treasury, is present level of benefits do deter some potential job-scekers. But the "why work? syndrome" tends to lack persuasiveness at present levels of unemployment and there is surely some force to the argument that those in work can reasonably beexpected to maintain through taxes the living standards of those less fortunately placed. Above all though, the resulting net saving would be quite disproportionate to the row it would create.

We all have some favourite candidates for the axe. For my part I have always regarded the subsidies given to capital-intensive refineries and the like, which would either go ahead without them or which would only add to over-capacity, as peculiarly silly. But that is chacken-feed at best.

In the end the Freasury has got to look to the big battalions - and that means defence and social security. which together account for not far short of half the total.

Thanks to the commitment to Nato's 3 per cent "real" growth-target - and the Falklands - defence spending has been growing faster. than any other programme apart from social security. And as President Reagan has discovered, high spending on defence immensely complicates the task of finding acceptable economies elsewhere. The 3 per cent commitment still has another year to go, which will make another year to go, which will make it difficult to wring out much next year. But I was delighted to read in Monday's Times of Niget Lawson's resolve to block its renewal. He might remind his colleagues that it was none other than that great warrior Winston Churchill, when Chancellor of the Exchequer, who devised the best curb on military appetites - the "so war for 10 years" formula - in the 1920s. When you turn to social security the real nightmare is the cost of pessions. I don't begin to know the answer. Since the principal cause of all the trouble is simply that we are all living longer, the logical solution mounted by the pessionable would be to raise the pensionable age. Against the current background of unemployment, that does not look easy. But not does disconnecting the value of the pension from the cost of living index, And while the only other radical solution - to raise the scale of contributions to the National Insurance fund - might increase the room to manocuvre with taxes, such a switch would hardky impress anyone. There is no very good reason why it should.

Still, the long-term cost of retirement is, or ought to be, an essential part of the true study of government, and it is good news that the Prime Minister is not being put off by the sort of scare stories that such scruting of basics invariably provokes. Not that that is going to be much help to Mr Roes this

A sure thing for the petropunters

Dublin The warning by the Irish Minister of Industry last week that the prospect of oil in abundance could "take too firm a grip on people's imagination' came too late. The people were already spending their imaginary petropunts and staking their future on this glorious potential windfall. As a reader writing to the Irish Times suggested, Ireland had found a new kind of unity: "We are all loyalists now", he declared.

Few ordinary people are ever likely to see any of the folly from this, the 73rd and first commercially promising offshore drilling operation, although, by playing the Stock Exchange, a few of the more florid have added some millions to their

But there is something therapeutic in counting wealth you are never going to have. Minds with no bent for mathematics are becoming cunningly numerate. As the projected oil flow rate grew from 2,642 barrels a day to 6,467, and then to 10,000, and natural gas made an appearance, it became imperative for conversational stylists who had been decorating their talk with knowing references to step-out wells, Jurassic oil-bearing sand the younger Cretaceous fields to try to calculate the real value of the discovery. Since so many factors are-totally unknown - the size of the field, for example - this was a problem which, if they were at school, would have had them flinging their maths exam papers from them in disgust. But someone devised a system that leaves Pythagoras looking like a oneplus-one beginner. The trick is to subtract all foreign partners from the affair, leaving only the Irish companies, then you look at the price of their shares, and estimate from those the amount of oil that must have been found to justify them. No self-respecting punter would allow you to arrive at the odds on a horse that way, but oil clearly is a special case.

The Irish believe they are particularly blessed since never before has oil sat so close to land in more obligingly tame and lukewarm water. Retrieving it, the story goes, will present no discomfort. You could almost stand on the beach and spoon if ashore. Although the pipeline should logically go ashore at Cork, which already has a refinery, one man determined to get a bit of the action s Mr Jim Falconer, of Waterford. A. brief study of Mr Falconer's capacity for rational planning suggests that if there are any bits going, they will go funeral parlow is located strategically alongside a church in a street full of surgeons. Around the corner he has a flourishing subsidiary, a public house with a branch of his undertaking business attached, no doubt to accommodate those who prefer to lubricate themselves directly to heaven rather than via the operating table.

How, I wondered, did this qualify him for a stake in the oil business. Mr Falconer produced a newly minted card: Falconer's Ships Chandler, Complete Marine Suppliers, seven-day, 24-hour service. Given the nature of the industry, liquor must be an essential adjunct to oil exploration, and perhaps the occasional coffin, too. No doubt Mr Falconer will swat up and discover what other contribution he can make to hasten the day the black stuff gushes ashore.

There are some fears, of course. The Mayor of Waterford has warned against the arrival of "black ladies of the night". Only here could the reference be to pigmentation of the soul and not the skin. And there is concern for Waterford's beaches.

Some are a little shame-faced that they should be so easer to despoil these glinting seas and the extraordinary evening stillness for a 10-year firstion with a glutinous mess, and in an area where bed and breakfast is still only seven Irish pounds, others wonder what effect the concomitant cupidity will have on the locals.

There is apprehension that like EEC membership, which was to make the farmers millionaires but left them prisoners to banks or bankrupts, this might turn out in the end to be another morose fiasco. thing like this before; in 1980 when BP's field at Porcupine Bay off Galway was said to contain up to 300 million barrels of recoverable oil and Charles Haughey gambled a new economic strategy on it. The optimists are also mentally reviving this field. In the grasping rivalry between Cork and Waterford, Cork men by tradition should have the advantage since they are notoriously "cute" which here does not mean pretty but

GOING PRIVATE

A few years ago Mr Benn promised this country a "massive and irreversible shift" in the location of economic power. Today there is, indeed, the prospect of an important change in the pattern of ownership and control. It could well be massive and may prove irreversible. But it will be very different in character from that intended by Mr Benn, Instead of more nationalization and socialization, many industries now in state hands are to pass into private ownership.

At present comment is focused on the proposed sale of 51 per cent of British Telecom. In this instance there is one dominant supplier and no declared intention of changing the position. Critics have asked, with reason and force, what purpose is served by converting a publicly owned monopoly into a privately owned one. There is a danger that, by failing to think through the purpose of privatization, the Government may become entangled in a protracted debate about British Telecom and so lose momentum in other areas.

Two kinds of privatization need to be distinguished. The first is the sale of state assets in an industry where there already are - or, at least, potentially could be - several competitors. The second is in the contrasting circumstances where, for technological reasons, there can be only one supplier. There is a powerful case for privatizing natural monopolies - such as British Telecom - which come into this second category, but it is less obvious than the case for privatizing competitive industries. The economic aspects, in particular, are most clear and persuasive when competition prevails.

If there are many suppliers of good or a service, rivalry between them ensures that output will expand until a point reached at which price matches the extra cost of production. As a further increase in output beyond this point would lead to lower prices and higher costs, the suppliers would suffer losses. So the further increase in output does not take place and instead resources are allocated to another industry where, once again, competition will establish the right balance between prices ownership is unnecessary, Market forces and private enterprise generate a socially optimal outcome if they are left to themselves. This outcome, known technically as marginal cost pricing, has been blessed by generations of textbook writers and is about as uncontroversial as any large principle in econ-

The real world is more complicated than textbooks and practice has a habit of overwhelming theory. But there should be no doubt that the basic ideas in the standard description of the competitive process are right. Nit-pickers may want to add refinements, qualifications and provisos. But they cannot deny that most of private industry is profitable, that much of the nationalized sector is unprofitable and that losses are incurred by nationalized industries because in certain operations, costs are conspicuously above prices. If these industries were in the private sector, the marginal operations would be closed down and the resources they employ would become available for more worth-while activities.

As it happens, the greatest potential gains from privatization do not come in new and growing industries, such as British Telecom, but in old industries, where loss-makers have been tolerated because their deficits are covered by profits elsewhere in the business or by subsidies from the Exchequer. Perhaps the most glaring example of this kind of inefficiency is the National Coal Board. The recent Monopolies and Mergers Commission's report showed how unprofitable mines are kept in production and their losses met by surpluses earned in efficient mines. Coalmining is certainly not a natural monopoly. For most of its existence the British coal-mining industry has been in the hands of several independent companies and, even today, this remains the normal state of affairs in other countries. On economic criteria the case for privatizing coal and splitting the industry into several units is far less controversial than the case for privatizing British Telecom.

in the strategy of forward West Germany's preponderant defence in West Germany, which contribution and critical geo-and costs. It follows that public country, but also on an industry's openness to imports from abroad. On this basis British Steel, BL, British Shipbuilders, Rolls-Royce and British Airways are definite candidates for privatization. In all five cases the main obstacle is an unsatisfactory commercial record in recent years, a consideration which is thought to preclude the introduction of private capital. It deserves to be emphasized that what matters in privatization is the ultimate benefit to the community. In these cases the benefit consists largely in the elimination of loss-making activities. If unsuccessful businesses were transferred to private hands at nominal prices and their new managers restored them to health, the ultimate result would be much better for society than if they were to stay in government ownership and lose money indefinitely. The unprofitability of a nationalized industry does not alone justify the deferment of privatization.

The case for privatizing com-petitive industries is, therefore the same as the case for competition. When a competitive industry is artifically contained in one enterprise and that enterprise is publicly owned, managers lack the discipline imposed by shareholders. As they believe that the state will, in the final analysis, cover their losses, there is a temptation to enjoy a quiet life by maintaining too many unprofitable operations. The perpetuation of unprofitable operations is evidence of resource misallocation and economic inefficiency. When nationalized industry managers take a more robust attitude and try to close down loss-makers, they are frequently hampered or prevented by politicians, responding to special lobbies and pressure groups, and an often exaggerated idea of the social benefit conferred by maintaining loss-making industries, which does not occur in the private sector.

So both economic and political arguments favour a programme of thoroughgoing privatization in competitive parts of the economy. The rationale for privatizing natural monopolies has a much larger political content and perhaps understand-The strength of competitive ably causes more disagreement. forces depends not only on the lit will be examined in a later

From the Venerable F. H. House

many years, I welcome the fact that you have devoted two leading articles to its activities (August 5

PAUL OESTREICHER,

Counting the cost Churches' role in world politics of motorways

From the Chairman of The Conservation Society

Sir, The extinction of the natural flora and fauna of this country in order to build motorways and other developments diminishes the en-vironment permanently: the developments exact a real, if unquantifiable, "opportunity cost" of indefinite duration in order to provide what may well prove to be a very short-lived present benefit.

Perhaps, therefore, the public sentiment noted by Michael Baily (report, July 29) which "supports those who champion the butterfly reserve rather than advocates of roads" has a sounder basis than the general tone of his article suggests.

The real objections to motorway building, however, are far more substantial and have been put many times by this society and other environmental groups without, unfortunately, making much impact on policy.

They are: firstly, that building more roads tends to encourage the growth of even more traffic, rather than the other way round; secondly, that increasing our national depen-dence on oil, which is the inescap-able effect of increasing road traffic, sole elect of increasing road traine, is likely to prove unfortunate, if not downright dangerous, in a relatively few years when diminishing oil supplies impose severe price inreases if not physical shortages; thirdly, that encouraging private road traffic depresses the provision of public transport, both by road and rail, to the deprivation of the 50 per cent of the population which, for various reasons does not possess its own cars; and finally, that increasing road freight traffic causes intolerable congestion, pollution and environmental degradation in urban areas, which motorways do nothing to alleviate and much to exacerbate.

Comparisons with other countries are misleading. They mostly have greater distances between towns, mailer population densities, and a smaller network of secondary roads. Hence this country must formulate its own transport policy to suit its own present and expected future

It makes sense to try to shift as much traffic as possible from road to rail to relieve road congestion, make better use of presently under-used assets, and above all, to preserve a greater range of options for the nime.

It makes no sense at all to continue sacrificing scarce land and irreplaceable amounty in a vain attempt to build sufficient roads to avoid all congestion. The ability to motor unimpeded is not one of the fundamental democratic freedoms. If congestion occurs, motorists can and do learn to live with it.

In all probability shortages of oil and other commodities will solve the congestion problem within the forescesole future. Why cannot we look ahead, for a change, and learn to adopt a sustainable life-style not prone first to harder of the arteries and later to pernicious anaemia?

Yours faithfully, R. D. HARRISON, Chairman, The Conservation Society Ltd. Netherlands. It could lead to the 136 Goldington Road, Bedford.

Oualified for the job

From Mr Keith Nickol

Sir, I express no view as to whether the alleged "infiltrators" at Cowley car plant disguised the extent of their qualifications for political reasons or not.

It is, though, in my certain knowledge that if a degree holder applies for a job he or she is often rejected as being over-qualified. If they do manage to get a job and their fellow workers find out they have a degree they are often not accepted, however good they are at their jobs.

Degree holders have as much right to a job as anyone else. It is quite wrong to assume them to be politically motivated if they apply for humble jobs. When I applied for a job as a hospital storeman I was asked searching political questions. It never seemed to occur to the interviewer that I was simply jobless ecking a job, Yours sincerely

Nigerian students

From Mr N. G. Joseph Sir, Those who have experience in dealing with Nigerian students will find the reported statement of the officials of the Nigerian High Commission unconvincing (The Times, August 2). The most common reason given for non-payment of fees by the students is the restrictions, as well as the long bureaucratic delays, in releasing the necessary foreign exchange. Yet the High Commission officials deny The concern of the educational institutions and hostels about the £3m owing by the Nigerian students is understandable. What is less well known, and should cause us equal concern, is the undeserved pri-vations and problems these young people suffer, with perhaps consequent ill effects on the quality of their work and health. While any approach made to the Nigerian High Commission for any assistance receives a polite response, I found their scope for speedy action is limited. Lack of information is not the real cause of this, as the High Commission officials claim, but a lack of a definite policy. One suggestion worth considering is to get a financial guarantee, supported by the Nigerian Government (even in the case of private students) before admission is given to students for any course of study. Yours faithfully, N. G. JOSEPH, Warden.

Bread for our neighbour and love for our enemy are rightly, biblically at the heart of the WCC's agenda. To separate religion from life is a heresy. God in Christ has everything to offer a starving child and the commander of a Polaris submarine.

From the Acting General Secretary of The British Council of Churches Sir, Thank you for your critical, yet sympathetic leader (August 10) on the World Council of Churches, The Church at every level needs loyal friends who are also unsparing Christian unity and the ecumenical movement, which the WCC serves,

There is, however, a contradiction at the heart of your critique. You rightly warn the WCC of the besetting sin of becoming an end in itself. Yet that is where your recipe would lead. You ask the WCC to devote itself more single-mindedly to the task of restoring Christian

True, Christian disunity is the Church's Achilles heel. It is a scandal because a disunited Church cannot effectively serve a spiritually and physically broken world. To this world Jesus, quoting Isaiah, says "I have come to bring good news to the poor, release to captives, to let the broken victims go free."

That is why the WCC is right to make the world its priority, to have spoken on Afghanistan (and probably wrong not to have spoken more strongly), right to combat racism, right to plead for economic justice, right to condemn an arms race that kills hungry children and threatens to destroy God's creation.

The danger is not, as you suggest, that the WCC is out of touch with "the ordinary Christian," It usually speaks only too eloquently for the world's ordinary Christians, most of whom are neither well-fed, white nor

That is why the average British churchgoer is so disconcerted. We cannot easily get used to being one of the world's minorities. I can attest to that personally. At home my views are held to be left wing. Abroad, more often than not, I find myself somewhere to the right of centre. The WCC's problem is that it is very close to the global centre yet its task is to reflect Jesus, its Lord, and not necessarily its membership.

The Church has no real choice. The world's agenda must always be its own agenda. But on God's terms. Woe to a Church that avoids the social, economic and political issues of its time. Each of them is also a spiritual issue. Only by facing political conflict can politics be transcended and healing be brought to the world.

Fire at sea

From Mr A. Crosby

Sir, I wish to inform The Times that their account (August 11) of the rescue of the crew of the German vessel Delistedt omitted to mention that the first vessel on the scene, the first to attach lines to the German vessel, alert the rescue services and contain the fire with its own firefighting equipment, was the Survey vessel Whitethorn.

She stood by tied to the German. vessel to ensure the safety of the German crew, putting herself at risk, not knowing the nature of the cargo or severity of the fire because the German vessel had lost all means of radio communication. The Master and engineers from the German ship came abound the Whitethorn to use the ship's radio.

I believe a good deal of credit should be given to the Master and crew of the Whitethorn for their competent and professional handling of the situation.

I might add that the RN Minesweeper Crichton appeared not to have adequate experience and equipment for this emergency in one of the busiest shipping lanes of the world. The Whitethorn had to supply additional fire-fighting equipment to the Navy vessel. Yours, etc.

Many of us find it difficult to enthuse about systems of treatment with a weak theoretical basis and little convincing evidence of effectiveness. The latter requires more than mere anecdotes of individual nationts' experiences.

Fortunately, the principles of comparative clinical trials are widely understood, although their extension to the comparison of conventional and alternative therapies will require a more generous degree of cooperation from the practitioners on both sides than has usually been evident. This pragmatic approach to the evaluation of therapy is unfortunately discouraged in your rather

Press in South Africa

From Mr Alan Locke

Sir, I purchased your newspaper August 1 ($1.50), to peruse the current events in South Africa and to put aside as a memento of my young son's birthday.

I see Donald Woods is still at it!

He states, apparently with a straight "face", that the South African press is not free. We all agree, but self-protection against subversion, while on the extreme side, is a natural tendency and the South Africans are correct in their desire to preserve some semblance of order in the middle of chaos.

The press is not free in the United Kingdom, either - as Mr Woods could well inquire of your own paper or, indeed, the Financial Times.

I have often wondered why the gentleman in question did not have the courage of his own convictions and become a journalist in, say, Uganda or Burundi - not run to the arms of white so-called democracy in England, and snipe.

He could do with a dose of black "rule", as I have experienced, or, better, five years on black-grown food in Angola or Mozambique. He would then run to South Africa as so many blacks do - not run away. Most sincerely.

The treasure hunt for antiquities

From the Chairman of the Antiquities Dealers Association

Sir, Mr Tatton-Brown (Angust 1) is absolutely correct in saying that many antiquities seem these days to command over-inflated prices, e.g. the recently sold Celtic horse harness mount from Buckinghamshire at £54,000, plus buyer's premium. However, before attacking the auction houses and "pedlars of and dealers in antiquities" he should first identify where his friends are.

Many antiquities in this country, to which he is largely referring, are actually found by chance, as against being "looted" (his words), or have pedigrees of residence in collections here. The Antiquities Dealers Association (ADA) was set up just over a year ago in an endeayour to over a year ago in an endeavour to combat many of the ills in the "trade". Many of its members bid for or supply material to numerous museums and work in close cooperation with them, often assisting in background research as to provenances, etc. Mr Tation-Brown's "two-pronged attack", the first against treasure-hunters and the second against dealers, is a little lopsided. ADA very much supports the first "prong", hence its endeavours to introduce, among other things, a system of registration of pieces, but on the second "prong" he attacks himself and the work of his ത്രീലയല

ADA has been accepted as an affiliated institutional member of the Museums Association; the Council for British Archaeology, espeially its director, Dr Henry Cleere, has been most helpful and interested in the formation of ADA and important discussions will shortly be in train between both bodies. Not least, the previous Minister for the Arts, the Right Hon Paul Channon, has similarly expressed his interest "in this development in the antiquities world" - the formation of ADA.

The members of ADA agree with and subscribe to, via their code of conduct, much that Mr Tatton-Brown propounds, except that they are leath to find themselves upon his second "prong"; uncomfortable as it will be, it will also mean that many museums will lose good friends, information and, not least, acquisitions that they might well otherwise not be aware of. Yours faithfully.

the Dutch.

Sir, The demise of economic and physical policy thinking and planning is to be viewed with great alarm. Your leading article, "A plan by any other name" (August 8) highlights the madness of planning Buried within this no policy/no planning philosophy lie elements of the belief that state involvement of almost any kind hinders and possibly prevents economic initiative taking. Is this really the case?

Surely the state plays a vital role by providing the physical, social and chnical infra-structure upon which the economy can develop. For example, without a coherent and long term policy as regards the communication/information infrastructure required for the UK, the future growth of the economy might be severely impeded.

Would it be too much to ask the renamed Social Science Research Council to fill the vacuum created by the closure of the "think tank" (NEDO beware) and to present a coherent series of policy options from its "centres of excellence"? If not where can we turn for real policy analysis? Yours sincerely, MICHAEL CROSS,

Pastor rescues a Victorian edifice

A fine piece of Victorian church architecture is about to be rescued from dereliction and brought back to life in the East End of London by the Christ Apostolic Church, one of the largest denominations in

The church, built to a design by James Brooks in 1867, and the matching complex of ancillary buildings which once housed a thriving Anglo-Catholic mission to Loudon's poor, are destined to become a showplace of Black Christianity in Britain. The parish church of St Columba was declared redundant about five years ago, caught between the upper and nether millstones of a falling congregation and the rising cost of building maintenance. The Grade A listed building has a noble exterior and superb internal proportions. It is to be restored in traditional style at a cost of more than a quarter of a million pounds. The Christ Apostolic Church, although pentacostal, is not far in fundamentals from the Church of England, and the Pastor, the Rev Ayo Omideyi, has a notices expensive. Anglican sympathies.

THE ARTS

Nobody has done more than Channel 4 to raise the status of the television film, an achievement recognized by the establishment of a special section for such work at the Locarno Film Festival. But Channel 4 reacted strangely to Locarno's offer to fly the flag, as John Bowen reports

Picture palace for the home

Film Festival this year was the inclusion of a special section devoted to television films. Of course there are plenty of television festivals (Monte Carlo, Venice, Banff) with categories for almost every sort of television, but Locarno is the first to recognize that a new artifact has arrived; the television film, and that its proper place for display may be at a film festival. It has been true for some time that any cinena film which is not a blockbuster may have to rely on an eventual sale to television to bring it into profit In the USA, with the advent of cable, there are feature films being made which are intended only for thevision. In Britain we have Channel 4, which has been putting up asubstantial proportion of film's budget in order to have the right to show it first on television. The BBC has the facilities to follow suit, but a relictance so far to do so.

The interdependence of television and cinema ias become close, and can only grow closer. One must sainte Locarne for recognizing the logic. Yet, just is within the world of cinema itself, taough films may take much money and time to set up, many of the decisions which concern them will be entirely frivolous. The admirable decision by the executive committee at Licarno came aboutsimply because an exhibition of drawings by kellini had fallen through: the television film section

The television movies had to be obtained quickly, and what is quickest is not always best. Entries for Monte Carlo. and Venice are chosen corporately after much discussion. Locarno had to go to production companies and ask for entries before a deadline. There were 92 entries from 21 countries, but even so those from Argentina and Egypt arrived after the deadline, and Australian entry is thought to be still on the way.

The worst disappointment was the ction of Channel 4, whose Films on 4 have carried the company flag for drama (with not much, to be sure, behind it) and topped its ratings. Gian-Carlo Bertelli, chief executive of the television films section, asked specifically for Walter, and was denied. He asked thereafter for any of the Films on 4, and was denied them

It appeared, therethe programme. It appeared, there-fore, as if the BBC had put in two films, both adaptations from literary sources, both set at the beginning of this century, both very painterly pieces of image-making, both moving at a leisurely pace. The duplication suggested that the BBC was making a statement about the nature and aims of its television drama, which is simply not true.

The 92 films could not all be shown in competition; no jury would tolerate so many. An ad hoc panel whittled them down to 18 in competition, 53 shown for information". With such an unselective entry-process, there was inevitably much dross, even in competition, where Ivanhoe was shown to a susurration of stiffled giggles from jury and journalists.

As for the international jury, it also had to be found quickly. There were two directors (Franco Rossi of Italy and Roger Gillioz of Switzerland), one writer (David Hare from Britain) and Alvin Marill from the USA, who was none of those, but the author of a definitive compilation of American television films, an encyclopaedist more than a critic. The difference between the attitudes of the jurous to heir common subject may best be illustrated by quotation.

for television are more interesting and important than those made for a collapsing film industry . . . I hate the depressing grammar of some tele-vision movies ... the English tendency to love the word more than the image." Alvin Marill: "A television movie is something which must be made quickly on a budget of between one and two million dollars. It must be designed to be split into 17minute segments, geared to presenting its stars, not what the writer wishes to say, and will be considered by the networks as a potential pilot." All four of the jurors spoke English; two spoke no other language. Many of the entries bore no subtitles. The prizes went to two English-language films and one German. Harry's Game, Yorkshire Television's wellmade thriller set in Northern Ireland, was awarded the Gold, Domino, very stylish symbolic piece in black and white, from Germany, about an actress and the unemployed, had the

There were other awards - to John Mortimer for his screen-play of A Voyage Round My Father and Rosemary Harris for her performance in To the Lighthouse. Domino picked up awards for its actress and cameraman; a Swedish entry had a Special Mention, and so, shamefully, did a routine American

Next year there will be a greatly refined method of selection, with restricted entry, though the practice of showing a selection out of competition as a supplement to the jury-entries will continue, and there will be the facilities of a market where independent producers will be able to show video-cassettes in private to possible buyers.

"Television movies" is not a denigratory description. It is likely that millions more people will see on television those films just shown in the Grand Piazza - Vivement Dimanche, Truffaut's slipshod homage to Hitchcock, the almost sinfully enjoyable danced Spanish version of Carmen, the sado-sentimental Merry Christmas, Mr Lawrence, in which David Bowie gives his Peter O'Toole in a Japanese prison camp, Channel 4, alone in Britain, perhaps alone in the world, has begun to reverse the process, and we must hope that next year at Locarno it will acknowledge as much, and be proud. As Gian-Carlo Bertelli said: "To go to somebody who makes wine, and ask for wine, and then they will not give you wine, there is no sense in it".

Opera

Production in perfect harmony

Don Giovanni

English National Opera begin their new season with a Don Giovanni in spruce condition on stage and orchestrally magnificent: the promise is bright. John Stoddart's cavalier costumes and versatile timbered sets are lit by Roger Frith in a sequence of gorgeous nocturnes, within which the Anthony Beach production has been revived most ingeniously and intelligently by Peter Foster. Movement is easy and elegant, and made without any banal choreography of the action, to fit well with the pace and feeling of the has just taken leave of Elvira and the peasant couple when he turns to sing them "Il mio tesoro". It is not just a set piece but an adieu, and a touchingly lovely one as delivered here by Adrian Martin, who shows rare artistry in his ability to turn a phrase suddenly into silver, as he does also in his meaningful inflexion of words.

The atmosphere on stage of calm elegance maintained through life-filled detail is well echoed in the pit, where Peter Robinson conducts the score even more marvellously than he did recently for Kent Opera. Nowhere is there a sense of pressure, not even in the supper scene, but instead phrase succeeds phrase in perfect balanced flow, and the texture is always held aloft in clear view. I wonder if the clarinets in this opera can ever have sounded so delicious, the trombones so awesome, and all without any sense of a conductor scoring points.

The cast is led, as before in this production, by Richard act, for instance, Don Ottavio Van Allan, a seturnine Don Giovanni. Dark in tone yet beguiling in its movement, his voice seduces with invitations to hell that any but the meanest spirit would willingly accept. It also matches the similarly grave accents of the new Leporello.

Rather surprisingly this is Norman Bailey, who does not yet sound at ease with Mozart's quicker diction or with the business of playing the clown His performance is a game one, but the style needs to be more secure in a production which shuns fussiness and leaves character to be established by voice and demeanour.

One who profits very much from this is Suzanne Murphy, singing with immense power as Donna Anna and yet holding to a vulnerability of tone that surrounds everything she does, decoration, with pathos. There is also a strong Commendatore from John Tranter, and Rodney Macann enters the company as a bluff Masetto.

Team of troubles

The boys of the Rathcoole estate did not all pray together, but they played together, which was surprising and exemplary as the estate was five miles from Belfast. Their football team had a Catholic name, Star of the Sea, and was good enough for Protestants to want to join. Boys coming along were ob-served not to see which foot they dug with but how well they could shoot. When the troubles started, Rathcoole, with a Catholic population of one in four, first seemed far enough away to preserve its harmony which was such, we heard last night, that even on July 12 Catholics joined in the fun.

What changed this live-andct-live situation was the shift of populations caused by the troubles. By 1972, Protestants, made homeless elsewhere, wen flocking in, bitter and demanding protection. Bricks instead of balls bagan to fly and Catholics, embittered in their turn

The Star of the Sea team struggled on but togetherness was over. Three would go to prison for terrorist offences and one, Bobby Sands, would die there on hunger strike, BBC1's Old Scores talked to former members of the team about how t was and is.

Not all friendships perished. That of Willie Caldwell, a rostestant, and Desie Black, a Catholic, has flourished but outside Ulster. Raymond McCord, a Protestant, told how he had tried to dissuade his coreligionists from terrorizing Catholics. He had his nose and hands broken for his pains. He is now to emigrate to Australia with his family. Sooner or later, he thought, there would be a civil war and it would be impossible to sit on the fence. Mr McCord, a welder, had concluded that Ulster was no place for a rational man.

One Catholic, Dennis Sweeney, whose experience of violence led him to become a doctor, was fairly sanguine. He hoped his son would one day play for the Star of the Sea. The rationale for his optimism was not drawn from him. He did not blame any of his teammates for their involvement. It was practically impossible, he said, to live in a working-class district and not be caught up. It was a case of "There, but for the grace of God, go I".

That grace was not much evident in this sad little programme. Olenka Frenkiel sounded purposeful but her often she seemed to be inquir ing after footballing potential rather than motivation and altogether we were left with that old feeling of Ulster hopeless-

One could write a small book about the stimulating, infuriat-ing but oddly satisfying per-formance of Bach's Goldberg Variations given at the Queen Elizabeth Hall on Monday.

Among contemporary plan-ists Andras Schiff may not have the most virtuosic manner, but he thinks enough for 10 pianists, and that is a gift to be prized. When he comes up with some seemingly zany notion -like ignoring Bach's own articulation of the 30 variations into the groups 1-15, 16-30 - you may be sure he has a deliberate suspend the plaintiff's licence were derived from a contract between him and the NGRC. That was so for all who took part in greyhound racing in stadia licensed by the NGRC. A survards' inquiry under the NGRC rules of racing concerned only those who voluntarily sub-mitted themselves to the stewards' jurisdiction. There was no public element in the jurisdiction itself. Consequences affecting the public generally could flow from the always refused to use the order of always refused to use the order of certiorari to review the decision of such tribunals since their authority was derived solely from contract, by agreement of the parties concerned: see per Lord Parker, Lord Chief Justice, in R v Criminal Injuries Compensation Board, Ex parte Lain (1967) 2 QBE64, 882).

Before the Supreme Court Act 1981 was passed Mr Henderson had accepted that anyone aggrieved by a decision of a domestic tribunat could only proceed by way of a claim for damages or for relief by way of a declaration or an injunction. The old case of The King & Benchery of Lincoln's Lang (1928) * Benchers of Lincoln's Inn ((1825) 4B and C855) was no authority to the contrary.

Mr Henderson had submitted

however that section 31 of the Supreme Court Act 1981 had given the court jurisdiction to entertain judicial review of the proceedings of domestic tribunal if, as in the present case, those proceedings w ikely to have consequences affecting the public generally. He based his submission upon the use of the word "shall" in section 31(1) and

His Lordship could not accept Mr Henderson's submissions. The purpose of section 31 was to regulate procedure in relation to regulate procedure in remarks indicial reviews, not to extend the jurisdiction of the court. It put into statutory language, with modifi-cations, what was in Order 53 of the Rules of the Supreme Court. Order 53 did not purport to enlarge the inrisdiction of the court so as to enable it to review the decisions of domestic tribunals.
He agreed with what Mr Justice which expressly extended the circumstances in which the preroga-tive orders of mandamus, prohibition of certiorari were available. Those remedies were not previously available to enforce private rights but were public law remedies. He said that although applicanons for judicial review were not confined to those cases where relief could be granted by way of prerogative order, he regarded the wording of Order 53, rule 1 and section 31(2) of the 1981 Act as making it clear that the application for judicial review was confined to reviewing activities of a public nature as opposed to those of a

His Lordship agreed with Mr Justice Woolf. Support for what he said was implicit in two decisions of the House of Lords, O'Reilly v Markman ([1982] 3 WLR 1096) and ([1982] 1 WLR 1121). He would distniss the appeal.

said that the authority of the stewards to suspend the licence of the plaintiff derived wholly from a contract between the plaintiff and the NGRC. He saw nothing to suggest that the NGRC had rights or duties relating to members of the public as such. What the NGRC did in relation to the control of greybound racing might affect a section of the public but their powers in relation to the matters with which the present case was concerned were contractual. Apart from the alteration of the Rules of the Supreme Court in 1978 and the provisions of the Supreme Court Act 1981 the prerogative orders would not lie to a tribunal set up by the NGRC because the powers of the tribunal derived from As to the effect produced by the amendments to the Rules of Court and by the 1981 Act, it seemed to his Lordship that the power under Order 53 to grant an injunction or to make a declaration was only exerciseable in cases where, previously to the change in the rules, the applicant could have obtained a prerogative order, and the remedy was in the realm of public law only. His Lordship saw nothing in the Supreme Court Act 1981 which suggested any parliamentary intention to extend the scope of the prerogative orders. He agreed that the appeal should be dismissed. Lucien Pissarro Anthony d'Offay

If you are trying to ie the famous son of a famous father, the disadvantages can very easily outweigh the advantages. The case of Lucien Pissam is a attests, he seems to have get on very well with Camille, though naturally not without mnor disagreements they even worked together on a series of sludgy and over-worked. The woodcuts which perfectly all landscapes change slightly when ance the distinct approaches of Lucien moves to England, but the two men. As his corre-spondence with his fither gradual liberation. The earliest works in the show, such as those painted at Eragny in the 1880s, are rather like Camille at his least appealing, oddly heavy,

English railway scenery, and a an almost oriental delicacy and of heavy dependence.

Yet curiously, in his woodcut book illustrations, both blackand-white and colour, Lucien had by this time for several years been producing something distinctively his own - possibly because here there was no competition with the father, and so no sense of inevitable inferiority. It seems to be only more than a decade after Camille's death in 1903 that the inhibition gradually relaxes, and Lucien's oils get more and more easy and personal. A painting like Brune de

One can see why Sickert admired him, and why he was at home among the Camden Town painters and the New English Art Club. Funnily enough, he came to be recognized as a repository of tradition at just the point that he himself ceased to be too heavily dependent on it. He was not only at home in England, be had come home and entered into his patrimony all the more securely by repudiating it.

the dubious origins of this change of heart it is not only welcome but deserves a wider application. The danger inherent in most of the debt talks with countries other than Poland is that the banks are still insisting on hammering out terms which are so strict that they do not solve the problem so much as put it off for a few years. Short-term agreements may look better from the point of view of the banks' balance sbeets, but they often mean that the countries will face a repayment bill in the late 1980s which they have virtually no chance of meeting. So the crisis could eropt again then.

In Europe, results were higher compared with the second quarter of 1982. Sales volume in the consumer groups rose by 1%. There were also improved results in most consumer groups, particularly in edible fats and dairy, food and drinks and detergents. The results of frozen products, however, were down on last year. While there were signs of recovery in chemicals and better results than last year in animal feeds and paper, plastics and packaging, transport did significantly less well and the total results of the industrial groups were lower. In this quarter, restructuring costs, mainly in the United Kingdom, were largely offset by the profit on the disposal of our shareholding in International Stores.

In North America our operations in total continued to make good progress; both Lever Brothers and National Starch had substantially improved results compared with last year. UAC International's sales volume and results were significantly down on last year as a result of continued difficult trading conditions in Nigeria and also in Francophone Africa. Elsewhere outside Europe and North America sales volume, including good contributions from our recent acquisitions in Chile and the Ivory Coast, showed a significant increase and total results were higher The drop in the concern share of associated companies' profit reflects the lower results of UAC of Nigeria, in which we have an interest of 40%. 16th August, 1983

Interim Dividend

The directors have declared an interim dividend of 10.50p per 25p share compared with 10.00p in 1982. The dividend will be payable on 4th January 1984 to shareholders registered at the close of business on 30th November 1983 and will cost £19.8m (1982 interim dividend £18.9m). The total dividend for 1982 was 26,50p per share.

Investment become

Total investment income of £135.4m increased in sterling terms by 171/2%; allowing for changes in the rates of exchange the growth was around 7%. Because of the sharp rise in stock market prices since the first half of last year, a reduced portfolio of securities is needed to cover insurance liabilities, the balance freed being credited to capital and reserves. As a direct consequence of this, the investment income allocated to general insurance operations is reduced by some £8m; a corresponding amount is included in the investment income on the capital and reserves.

Royal Life Insurance During the first half of the year new annual premiums written by Royal Life increased by 163% to £32.2m and new single premiums increased by 136% to £39.4m. The significant rise in annual premiums was largely the result of a substantial increase in endowment mortgage business following the introduction of a new system of crediting tax relief on mortgage interest (MIRAS). Sales of unitlinked business have been very satisfactory following Royal Life's entry into this market in 1982. The long-

The engineers fight back - 2: Susan Bevan with the second of a series

New-look TI improves but has it done enough?

After a battering at the heart of For example, the period of A good move here has been thousands in industrial plant—the metal industries, TI Group, expansion of the steel industry the acquisition in 1981 of the and needing constant replacements the steel industry. the metal industries, TI Group, which was better known as Tube Investments, is showing signs of recuperation. A slimmer and very different looking group last week reported pretax profits of £6.2m for the first half but is a long way from the annual profits of almost £80m Ti was notching up five years

"What groups like us have had to do is reduce our dependence on those parts of engineering which don't have a future", said Sir Brian Kellett. chairman of TL

"The whole process of remarkets.

structuring TI has been to After rechange the mix of the business late 1960; away from the heavy end of the pationalize industry and the commodity type of business.

On its way through the fire, TI has changed its name and sold its London headquarters. More materially, it has shed its aluminium business and the last of its steel interests.

Branded consumer products have become the white hope for profits this year. Products with high value added that can prosper through recession are the new keys to the larger specialist engineering division, which is taking over the running from the commodity-like tubes of the traditional business. The process has been painful.

The workforce has been halved in three years to 32,000. The cost of closures, redundancies and the loss on the sale of British Aluminium amounted to £30m over 1981 and 1982.

Net assets employed in the business have dropped from £554m in the 1979 balance sheet to £328m at the end of last year. Out of this total specialist engineering products now account for 35 per cent, against only 13 per cent three years ago. Consumer products, mainly domestic appliances and a heavily pruned and revemped increased in importance from 20 per cent to 40 per cent. But the most dramatic symbol of change was the sale for £17m last October of TTs 58 per cent holding in British Aluminium. Falling world prices and competitive weaknesses in a global market where British Aluminium was a minnow among giants led to an attributable loss for TI of £13.7m in 1981 and a further £3.8m in the months of 1982. before its sale to Alcan.

The disposal meant a £36.3m write-off but it was a vital step in the process of making TI less of a helpless victim of the swings and roundahouts of the economic cycle.

With the nature of its businesses and most of its assets in Britain, TI's progress has always been closely tied to the performance of the British economy. Pretax profits rose steadily rather than spectacularly through the 1970s from £18.7m in 1971 to £78.4m in 1978 (boosted by the consolidation of British Aluminium).

Then came a setback to £52m as the recession began to bite in 1979 and an inexorable slide into a loss of £23.1m in the depths of 1981.

The hesitancy of Britain's overall recovery was faithfully reflected in Tr's depressingly small pretax profit of £4.7m last year and even today the turnround is not across the board. Steel tubes remained stuck in the doldrums during the first half of this year with dismal prosperts and the depressed machine tools sector only recently beginning to perk up, led to lower profits from the engineering division.

But the increased emphasis on consumer products - washing machines, heaters and kettles with names like Creda, Glow-Worm and Russell Hobbs - is paying dividends.

This division produced £10m of the £14.1m trading profit total for the half year. Meanwhile a new approach to Raleigh bicycles - no longer a commodity pumped into in-secure Third World markets but a highly promoted style-conscious business catering to trendy curopeans - has set this loss-making division on the way to break even this year. Sir Brian, who has frequently ponred cold water over premature forecasts of recovery, is more confident now but characteristically not over-exuberant. "What we are seeing is the economy coming up with a consumer-led boom but it will be a slow process for it to spread through and ultimately bring up

heavy capital investment. "I don't think there is any doubt that the volume of world demand for some of these heavy products will be less in the

There are technical trends. too. The volume of the machine tool industry is less than it was partly because of the recession but partly due to the industry's That compares well with only £4.7m for the whole of last year, but is a long way from the way from the compares well with only £4.7m for the whole of last year, but is a long way from the compares to the industry's own, success in producing advanced tools that last longer."

Sir Brian helicana discussions are considered to the industry's own, success in producing advanced tools that last longer. Sir Brian believes that the slim-line TI has completed the restructuring needed to face the future. The group's critics think it is not before time.

Even before the recession took hold it was recognized, within TI as well as outside, that the group faced structural headaches. Its main profit-earners were in mature or declining steel business. TI put life into struction of the doomed Invergordon aluminium amelter.

With hindsight, too much attention was paid to producing intermediate goods where marketing and innovation play a small part

It still remains to be seen whether TI has yet done enough to secure its future. Market hopes for this year, taking into account a bumper second half for domestic appliances and a recovery in machine tools, are for pretax profits of about £20m still not much of a return on capital employed of nearly £350m. Uncertainty continues to hang over bicycles and steel tubes. There is not much TI can do about the latter but it is putting its back into Raleigh.

Even with its big bicycle brand names, TI Raleigh was criticized for depending too much on bulk sales to what proved unstable Third World markets, and as a complacent monopoly which succumbed to cheap imports at home.

Since the dark days of 1981, when Tr's cycle and toy division lost £10.5m, Raleigh has undergone a complete methods to marketing. Employrange has been both rationa-lized and redesigned and the stress has moved to selling bikes as consumer goods for the Ishion-conscious.

Some £7m will be spent on the revemp this year and the cautious Sir Brian has "great confidence" in the division's fiture. "We have a very young and active management bringing this business back to shape he savs.

The big success of the BMX Burner for boys has helped Raleigh to restore its share of the British market to its pre-crisis 50 per cent from a low of 35 per cent in 1981. But there is still a long way to go if the business is to return to the big profits of five years ago.

Many TI followers believe the money and attention could be better spent elsewhere and cheer rumours like those last week suggesting a Japanese buyer for the bikes. But there is no debate on the improved potential of the engineering side.

Sir Brian's favourite example of the group's direction today.

KFW represents an important move both into higher technology engineering and the United States market. Its flashwilded rings, an important component of aircraft gas turbine engines, dovetrils neatly with the business of II Reynolds, which is the leading supplier of these products to the European aerospace industry.

At the same time KFW's subsidiary, Abar, is the United States leader in another high technology growth area used in the production of sophisticated alloys.

Demand for the aircraft components is depressed but KFW made a profit of almost £5m in the year before its purchase and Sir Brian is looking forward with relish" to the time when the airlines are back on the buying trail. Another bright spot is Crane Packing which leads the way in mechanical seals, scattered in American group King Fifth mem whatever the stage of the Wheel. The £25.6m purchase is busines cycle. Similarly, good business is being won in garage

In machine tools, TI Matrix and TI Churchill are now half the size they were two years ago. The focus now is on computer-controlled tools designed with a close eye on consumer require ments. It is hoped these machines will fend off the Japanese threat in the reviving

While II is now hoping to make more than the former owner from the Alfred Herbert range of computer controlled isthes which it bought from the receiver for £850,000, the industry clearly is still in a state problem, though capacity has been radically pruned at the commodity end of the business. Talks go on with British Steel on a concerted rationalization of the industry and some most important element in the saga of TT's struggle back.

Data Communications

Sales amounted to £242,167,000 representing an increase of 36% over the previous year. Whilst some of this increase was attributable to the devaluation of sterling against the US dollar, there was substantial growth in real terms.

Unfortunately the profit contribution was less than we had planned because of the disappointing performance of Racal-Milgo, Miami, which has been a major profit contributor for many years.

The performance of Racal-Vadic of California. however, was excellent and profit margins were maintained.

The worldwide demand for data communications products continues at record levels as does the requirement for modems at all speeds.

Radio Communications

Sales of radio communications systems were £187,274,000. This was only a modest increase on the previous year and resulted from a slowdown in the rate of orders received from overseas countries following the sharp fall in the price of oil. However, orders are not being lost to competitors in these territories but the signing of certain major contracts is being delayed by twelve months or more, due to the current economic difficulties in these countries.

Despite this problem the tactical radio communications companies had their best year by far with sales and profits at record levels. Our company continues to be the acknowledged world leader in this field. The Sultanate of Oman recently placed an order, valued at £20,000,000, for JAGUAR VHF anti-jamming frequency hopping radios. This brings the total for these equipments up to £30,000,000. Approximately half of this amount has already been delivered.

Sales of all marine electronics products grew to £85,233,000.

This business is now directed through one organisation which controls and co-ordinates the activities of 24 UK and overseas companies. Plans for expansion in a number of key areas-navigation, radar, controls, simulation and serviceare centralised within this group with particular emphasis on total systems.

Defence Radar & Avionics

During the year sales grew strongly to reach £81,751,000, of which defence radar contributed £66,000.000, this being three times more than that of 1980.

The many contracts being won for radar electronic warfare (EV) systems demonstrate the group's growth in this fast developing area. Some 25 years of experience in designing, developing and manufacturing EW systems has enabled Racal to emerge as a leading authority in desence systems for all environments on land, at sea and in the air. A notable success was a £20,000,000 order for the supply of advanced electronics support measures (ESM) systems for Royal Navy submarines. Further naval orders in excess of £50,000,000 are confidently expected over the next few weeks.

Increasing participation in major collaborative programmes has resulted in a joint agreement with Westland Helicopters to develop avionics management systems.

Energy Resources

sales reached £45,038,000 in a difficult year for those involved in the oil related industries.

The formation of an energy resources group has brought together specialist companies involved in precise positioning and offshore survey technologies, principally for the oil and gas industries throughout the world.

Other Activities

These account for the remaining £122,105,000 of sales. It is interesting to note that this figure is as large as the turnover for the entire Racal Group as recently as 1977. The other businesses are: - acoustics, antennas, computer-aided engineering, communications security, data & communications recording, financial terminal systems, health & safety, intruder detection, logistic support and automatic/diagnostic test systems, measurement technology, microelectronics, microwave components

Cellular Radio

Our successful application for the private sector licence to operate a nationwide public telecommunications service based on cellular radio technology, has opened up an exciting new business opportunity. The licence, which runs for years, permits us to set up and operate a system which will provide portable access to the public telephone network on a vast

We foresee a significant sales turnover around 1990, with profit margin at least comparable to that currently achieved by the Group as a whole.

Pay Television

We in Britain stand on the brink of a television revolution already referred to as the third age of broadcasting.

The Group, through its equal joint venture partnership with Oak Industries Inc. of California, is already involved in this new area not only in the United Kingdom but throughout Europe. Racal-Oak Limited, our recently formed associate company, blends together our own expertise with that of Oak Industries, a United States market leader in many aspects of pay television.

Overseas Sales

Deliveries outside the United Kingdom amounted to £532,000,000, an increase of 14% over the corresponding figure for last year and represent 70% of total sales. Exports from the UK maintained Racal's position in the top twenty

Research and Development Racal has from its carliest days been committed to a policy of funding the great majority of its R & D from its own resources to develop proprietary products for the world market. This policy has been continued with an increasing proportion of product developments, in the areas of business acquired with Decca, being handled this way.

Appreciation

The skill and dedication of our staff was formally recognised last November, when our Company was named as the winner of the 1982 United Kingdom Business Enterprise Award. I am certain that it will be your wish to join me in congratulating all the members of the Racal team for their tremendous efforts which have done so much to put our Company in the position it now holds in the world of professional electronics. Additionally, we should thank most sincerely their families for their loyalty, encouragement and understanding which is essential for our success and is so greatly appreciated.

The Future

The former Decca group of companies is now going forward strongly. The major problem remaining to be solved is the limination of the losses being incurred in the field of small boat radar and this year we expect to go a long way towards achieving that goal. The defence radar company is especially successful - its order book is large and growing and the future prospects are most encouraging.

Several of our smaller businesses are rogressing well, any of which could develop into a major activity.

The award of the cellular radio licence was one of the most exciting events in the history of Racal, In the short term, trading losses will be incurred and a substantial investment will need to be made whilst the system is being evolved and introduced. However, it is anticipated that by 1987/88 trading profits will be earned and that by the early 1990's the operation will be cash positive. Cellular radio will undoubtedly be a substantial contributor to our future earnings. The combination of our existing businesses, our product development policy and the new growth areas, such as cellular radio and pay television, will ensure the continued growth of the Company in the years ahead. At March 31st, 1983 the Company had net cash of some £3,000,000 compared with net borrowings of £46,000,000 the year before. This cash position will improve considerably throughout the year and earnings will benefit as a consequence With regard to the current financial year I am confident that the management changes that have taken place at Racal-Milgo, Miami, will result in an improved contribution to Group profitability. Referring to the other factor which adversely affected last year's results, namely, the delay in the placing of a large number of orders from overseas, there are signs that the position is now improving. Provided therefore that major delays do not continue and subject to any other circumstances beyond our control, we can look forward to another record year, our 29th in SHOOMSON.

ECGD hint

The committee of inquiry, announced yesterday, to investigate the state-run insurance agency, the Export Credits Guarantee Department, has a three-pronged brief.

Most fascinating will be to look into "the possibility of devolving any functions to the private sector or collaborating with the private sector in carrying them out".

This suggests that the ECGD. which has £29bn in British exports on its books, is a monopoly.

But Sir Peter Matthews, th Vickers chairman, who heads the inquiry, already knows (having served on the Export Guarantees Advisory Council) that all its work is open to private sector competition.

The largest of the specialist business in one year that ECGD guarantees in two to three days, the House of Commons Committee of Public Accounts heard this year.

It concluded: "We are not convinced enough is yet being done to draw upon private sector expertise." It did not do so because ECGD was seen as jealously guarding its activities. but because the state agency, having had staff cuts, does not possess sufficient specialists to cover its outstanding risk.

The task facing Sir Peter. therefore, is not to bring large chunks of a state business to a hungry market of investors. He has to see whether existing private activites can be encour-

The review, the first in 11 years, is welcomed by industry. Lord Selsdon, chairman of the CBI's export credit committee, said yesterday: "We are delighted the government has decided to act.

"In today's highly competi-tive trading conditions, the time is ripe to ensure that the department can provide UK exporters with credit insurance and financing facilities as effective as those available to our international trading com-

EDGBASTON: Warwickshire (6pts) A career best 201 not out by A career best 201 not out by Nigel Briers could not have the way for a Leicestershire victory yesterday. Briers, who dominated in stands of 133 with Balderstone, 132 with Davison and 133 with Whitaker, put Leicestershire in a virtually impregnable position in an inaings of 354 minutes, but the delay in the declaration while he, resolted that milestone left Warwickshire an almost impossible target. They had already abandoned the chase when had light and rain ended any chance of Leicestershire bowling them out.

Leicestershire's cautious batting

Leicestershire's cautious batting had given them a useful launching pad for an assault; and 152 rons came in the two hours before launch. By then Briess had reached 186, for exceeding his previous best of 119 compiled on this ground four years ago, and the lead had stretched to 299.

If there was no serious question then of a declaration, by the time Briers resched his chancelets double containy with 29 fours and one six, it had become a pressing one. had become a pressing one. Whitsler in the meantime had taken the opportunity to notch his maiden 50. Tolchard, not noted for his generosity in these matters, allowed Old to complete the remaining five bells of the over after the milestone had been passed, before setting Warwickshire to score 340 in 210 minimus.

It was always a stiff target, but while Kallicharran was at the crease it remained an outside possibility. He began with four boundaries and at test, with Amiss also in occupation, Warwickshire were by no means out of the hunt at 104 for two. Four tight overs, from Steele and Clift, put the brakes on, however, and cost Amiss his wicket as he chafed against the restriction, and was run out trying to break free. Had Humpage settled, the target might still have been autainable, but Taylor accounted for him to begin a Taylor accounted for him, to begin a

His next wicket, in the lest over before the final 20, was the vital one of Kallicharran, who had been living dangerously outside the off sump for some time, and now found the safe hands of Steele. Smith chose the same route with 18 overs remaining, but before the Leicestershire bowlers could provide the perfect justification for their captain's declaration, the unspires called a halt, Lethoridge and Dyer accepting their offer with alargrity. His next wicket, in the last over nlucity.

It must also be recorded that this was Surrey's 1,000th victory in 2,461 championship matches since 1864, the season most statisticians now accept as the date of the competition's inception. Surrey are only the second team to attain this milestone. Yorkshire have 1,163 wins from 2,486 fixtures and Lancashire are the only other county with more than 900 wins to their credit. They began a year later than the other two sides and now have 913 wins from 2,385 matches. By Lewine Mair

Peter Moore, the No 2 seed, survived a warning, a penalty point and a match point before emerging to take his place in the quarter finals of the 18 and under junior grass court championships, sponsored by Frudential, at Eastbourne.

The penalty point was for racket abuse but, in truth, Moore's match with Christopher Peet was a very with Christopher Peet was a very gentlemanly affair compared to the one between Richard Whichello, the No 1 at 16 and under, and Austin Brice, the outstanding youngster in the year below which the forme-won 3-6, 7-5, 7-5.

It was one of those days when one felt grateful that Whichello was behind netting. He looked decidedly menacing from the start and, although the angry tennia he played was at times most effective, his lack of self control almost cost him the

As it was, he again found himself he was two points away from defeat that he began to play more constructively. Having allowed Brice, with his sharp serve and volley tactics, to dominate the first eight games, he dropped only six points in taking the last four. After he put away the winning forehand volley he did a crazed dance at the net before fleeing from his cage. action which prompted the referent to have a word with him at the end In the 14 and under section, there was a heartbreaking defeat for the No 3 seed. Eddery has the whip hand on brave Caerleon

By Michael Seely

Princess stamped themselves as better horse on fast going and it leading contenders for the Prix speaks volumes for the threede l'Arc de Triomphe on rainsoaked ground at York yesterday. Brilliantly ridden by Pat Eddery, who was gaining his third consecutive triumph in the centrepiece of the opening day of Yorkshire's festival of racing, the French Derby winner showed superb courage and stamina when resisting the determined assault of Hot Touch, Willie Carson also showed fine judgment in his Stakes after inspecting the handling of Sun Princess, who ground this morning, the trainer made every yard of the running to beat Green Lucia by four lengths in the Yorkshire Oaks. Despite the late withdrawal of the ante-post favourite. Shareef Dancer, because of the soft going, nothing should be allowed to detract from the sterling performance of Caer-hopeful of watching the Irish leon. Confident of his mount's Derby winner confirm his stamina, Eddery dictated the gallop on the winner. Both John French and Gorytus launched dangerous-looking attacks halfway up the straight, but in a desperate last-furlong battle the horse. This appeared to be Caerleon was always just an ideal opportunity of winning holding Hot Touch's challenge. The pair finished one and a half lengths ahead of John French with Gorytus in fourth place. Both Caerleon and Sun consident that Caerleon is a year-olds consistency and toughness that he has been able to win two group one races under these conditions. The trainer is still unable to confirm that Caerleon will be the Ballydoyle representative at Longchamp.

The withdrawal of Sareef Dancer must have come as a bitter disappointment to the enormous crowd who had been hopeful of watching the Irish superiorty over Caerleon. Michael Stoute said; "It is very annoying and frustrating, but I know I made the right decision. I have no immediate plans for another group one race on fast ground and as the season progresses these opportunities

Soft going hardens Teenoso's chance

By Michael Phillips, Racing Correspondent

The ground could easily hold the key to the outcome of the Great Voltigeur Stakes at York today, now that there has been rain in an appreciable quantity there. The Derby winner. Teenoso, who excelled himself on softish ground in the spring will be in his element once again, and he is my selection. Had it remained firm, it might have been sensible to go for the Eclipse Stakes winner, Solford, who was blissfully at ease on the firm ground at Sandown, especially as Tecnoso looked like a cat on hot bricks when he finished only third behind Shareef Dancer and Cacr-leon in the Irish Derby where the ground was hard. But yesterday's rain on top of a heavily watered course will have been like sweet music in his trainer, Geoff Wragg's, ears, and anyone who was at Lingfield in May and at Epsom on Derby Day will not need reminding hom effective he is when there is how effective he is when there is

The fact that Wragg is also running a pacemaker for Teenoso implies that he is happy with the colt's condition even though his target in the long run is the St Leger. Yesterday, George Robinson, our Newmarket Correspondent, said that Wragg has every reason to be pleased with Teenoso, because the colt has been looking and moving ell at home.

Robinson also says that Dazari is expected to acquit himself well after his victory in the Scottish Derby. However, bearing that race in mind, there must be a doubt whether Dazari will cope with Seymour Hicks let alone Teenoso. Seymour Hicks let alone Teenoso. Seymour Hicks let alone Teenoso. Hicks let alone Teenoso. Seymour Hicks looked very unlucky at Ayr where he got into all manner of trouble in the straight. Yet he was still beaten only a neck. Wragg must have a pretty shrewd idea whether Teenoso can beat them because he also trains Hot Touch, who was breathing down their necks at Ayr.

With 18 stayers standing their ground overnight, the Tote-Ebor is its usual open self. Another Sam the hero of the occasion last year, now heads the weights, and he will be endeavouring to become the first horse to win this race twice since Flint Jack achieved the feat in 1922 and 1923. Another Sam seems bound to run his customery sound race. as indeed should his stable companion, Ambiance, who acquis-ted himself so well against Prince of Princes at Lingfield earlier this However, confidence has now returned to Pulborough, and one only has to east the mind back to last year to realize what a good chance Mubarak of Kuwait would have at his best. He won the King George V Handicap over a mile and a half at Royal Ascot, beating Khairpour, and he returned to that course in the autumn to win the Gordon Carter Handicap over two miles by five lengths.

I regard Abdoun as a greater danger to Mubarak of Kuwait than the ante-post favourite, Band, who seems to have a lot on his plate for a three-year-old. A winner over a mile and threequarters at Newmarket in the spring. Abdoun has been trained Woolmer's absence with a back sprain leaves Kent's early batting largely in the hands of the young English talent. Aslett, Benson, Cowdrey and Taylor are all either 24 or 25. Benson has been making a lot of runs and Cowdrey is now such a good and spiritied cricketer that one begins to wonder whether he might not one day take off and achieve great things. In the whole world there can be few, if any, better fielders, Without Woolmer, Kent may need Cowdrey to bowl today, as well as to bat at No. 5 and catch swallows. Dilley will play if passed fit this morning, if not, Jarvis will. There is a good blend to this Kent side. Hampshire, more typical of the modern set-up, would not have got where they are without substantial overseas assistance. But they, too, have an English captain with a traditional English background.

Although winners of the championship in 1961 and 1973 and of the John Player League in 1975 and 1978. Hampshire have yet to play at Lord's in a one-day final. Unless they do so soon they will be getting a complex about it. If being at home gives Kent a slight edge, Hampshire meant it when they said after the draw had been made for the semi-finals that it suited them in every respect but one. They were hoping, as happened, to draw Kent as their opponents, but at Southamp-follow as his eldest son has run scorer of all time: a difficult act to follow, as his eldest son has discovered ever since he first played for the Kent Second Eleven when aged 15, and a Tombridge schoolboy.

"I was expected to play the same way, but how could I possibly emulate that brilliant technique", he said. "I've often been criticised for my method which some propole see my method, which some people see as unorthodox . . . although unkinder words have been used! But in the modern game you have to play shots...you have to entertain and so attack is uppermost in your mind. Speciators aren't as keen to see the sort of long innings my father was so very good at." No one can deny Chris Cowdrey's ability to play shots. His century at Chelmsford last month, which brought Kent to an unlikely victory over Essex in the second round of the NatWest Trophy, was vintage one-day entertainment. A formight tater he was top scorer again as Kent crushed Warwickshire in the quarter-final at Canterbury. His imperious six off the fast bowler Willie flogg, which soared into the crowd on the midwicket boundary, was followed by an audacious, lunging cover drive which most mortals would not have reached. Both were shots beyond the imagination of his father.

"Those two innings were absolutely vital to Kent", the Kent manager, Brian Luckhurst, said, "What impressed me was his maturity and authority. He played himself in the beautiful to t himself in . . . took the quick singles and accelerated brilliantly. They were perfect examples of how a one day innings should be compiled." "So I decided it was time to analyse my game. When I was in Australia in the winter I set myself a stiff fitness routine, lost over a sto and started to work on all aspects of my game, including bowling and fielding, to make myself a more complete cricketer.

"it's no longer relevant to compare me with my father. People no longer ask me if he advises me because it's obvious he doesn't ... or if he does that I'm taking no notice! I'm also now beginning to benefit from my name. I've been making hundreds and they've been given more prominence than if it were plain Joe Bloggs."

Cowdrey has proved himself good enough for his county, and his next aim is to play for England. In the meantime he is casting a wary glance over his shoulder at a 20 year-old batsman who has just joined the Kent staff and is making a stack of runs in the second eleven. The player's name is Graham Cowdrey, third son of Colin, who could be playing for the first team by the end of the season. "I shan't mind", said Chris Cowdrey, "As long as he isn't taking my place."

The newly-crowned princes take golden ways to the Palace

More than half the world championship gold medal winners are expected at Crystal Palace this weekend, when Steve Cram leads a British team looking to repeat the European Cup final success they scoredin Zagreb in 1981. They had their best ever performance in the bi-annual competition in that year, and finished third in the men's event, and equal third on points with the West German women, and only conceded the place on the countback of individual winners.

Cram has decided to contest the 1,500 metres, his world championship gold medal event, in the competition which allows only one athlete per country in each event. Cram's decision means that Steve-Overt will not be running, a disapointment for everyone, including the event's spondors. U-Bix, who also have Overt on an individual contract.

Overt turned down the chance of running in the 5,000 metres, telling Bill Evans, the British Amateur Athletic Board chairman, who offered him the place, that his training was not geared to that event Ovett did not ask to run in the 800 metres. though many had expected him to. He said that he thought Peter Elliott was the evident choice.

Cram was the substitute for an injured. Ovett two year ago in Zagreb in the 1,500 metres, when the finished third. But he will be an obvious favourite for his event which is on Saturday, the same day that Fatima Whitbred, a silver medal winner in Helsinki, will be throwing the javelin.

Finland did not reach either of the finals, so Miss Whitbread will not get the opportunity of a return match against Tima Lillak, who beat her to the gold medal on her last throw of the world championships competition. But there will be several quick return matches for marginal losers, among them Werner Schildhauer of East Germany against Alberto Cova of Italy in the 10,000 metres, which is also on the first day.

In Helsinki, as in Athens last year in the European championships, Cova came from behind on the last lap, as if in slow motion, to pip Schildhauer for the gold. The reaction to such supreme efforts is often finishing down the field in the next race, but with the system of one athlete per country in each event, and his team mates yelling to remind him of it, patriotism could help Cova find the reserves for another winning sprint finish.

Daley Thompson, Britain's only other gold medal-winner from Helsinki, declined the offer of the place in the long jump, explaining that his efforts in winning the decathlon had exhausted him. The place in the 5,000 metres has been given to Steve Harris, who won the World University Games championship at that distance, but just failed to qualify for Heisinki, even though he also won the AAA title. Harris ran into his best form a little late, but this can be put to best use

ATHLETICS: THE BATTLE CONTINUES AT THE EUROPEAN CUP FINAL

Keith Connor will be party to another interesting confrontation in the triple jump. Connor was widely expected to win the event in Helsinki, but final exams and his relatively shallow year in training, which is designed to bring success in next year's Olympic Games, conspired to bring about Connor's failure to qualify for the Helsinki final. Zdrislaw Hoffman of Poland produced one of the best performances of the championships, improving with each of his six jumps, to overtake Willie Banks for the gold medal in this event.

Allan Wells should need no urging, especially in the 200 metres. Wells has been nominated for both sprints, but in the longer one he will find Pictro Mennea of Italy, who has beaten Wells by a total of two-hudredth of a second in their last two major confrontations. The Italian won the Olympic gold by the one fraction in Moscow, leaving Wells with the silver. Then last Sunday, Memca again beat Wells by the slightest possible margin, this time for the bronze medal. Wells was thus, relegated to his second fourth place of the championships.

There is no possibility of Britain challenging the prospective winners of the week-end events, the Soviet Union or East Germany, but the West German men are perennial targets for third place, and but for one woman - Jarmila Kratochvilovs - Britain's women ould be vying for third as well. There is some confusion as to which three individual events, out of 100, 200, 400 and 800 metres, plus the two relays, that Miss Kratochvilova will contest, but she will surely be a onewoman strike force,

Kenyan seeks inquiry

Nairobi (Reuter). - Isiah Kiplagat, the secretary of the Kenyan Amateur Athletic Association, has called for an official investigation into the poor showing of Kenya at the world championships in Helsinki. "We have always prided ourselves as a leading athletics nation in Africa, and to return home empty-handed for a disprace "he tald resource on his is a disgrace," he told reporters on his return from the championships.

"Our athletes have shamed as and we must find out why," he said, demanding an inquiry to examine the medal famine after the athletes turned in world-class times at meetings in West Germany and Hungary before the championships.

RUGBY LEAGUE: THE MAN BEHIND KENT INVICTA

A 'hip' chairman out on a limb

When policemen start to look younger than you, it is time to start worrying, but when the chairman of a Rugby League club looks younger, it is time for serious panic to set in, Paul Faires, the chairman of the Rugby League's newly-action. It is a ball-handling game. The tackles are elected club, Kent Invicta, is not only aged 29, and not only runs a record business, but also spent the golden years of his youth as a disc ockey on the pirate radio station, Radio What is more, he is a dyed-in-the-wool Southerner. "I went to watch Fulham Rugby League club as a joke. But I was mesmerized he said. That was three and a half years ago, and being a hip young go getter of a fellow, he thought Rugby League was suitable for an immediate transplant to the garden of England.

clean and all out in the open. There is none of that hiding under a pile of bodies, the dirty play that goes on unseen, the stamping on heads, that makes Rugby Union, I believe, a game of cowardice and thuggery.

Mr Faires is hoping an 8,000 crowd will come out of curiosity — to the first match, and hopes from this to enrapture a regular following of 2,500 a match. Kent Invicts are quoted at 25-1 for the second division championship. "If we finish eighth or above, I will be pleased. But morale is so high at the moment, we have managed to sign so many good first division players, we have such a superb coach, Bill Goodman, that there are times I believe we will

Residential Property/Baron Phillips

Before and after. A once decaying inner-city block of council flats (see story), is being refurbished so well that already 124 apartments have been sold at attractive prices. The development, less than a mile from Liverpool's main shopping centre, is proving popular with young couples.

Less than a mile from Liverpool's council flats becoming "smart act was to tear off the top two floors main shopping areas is a fine apartments", but as the photo-example of what can be done with graphs show, Barratts has come with standard room sizes. Britain's decaying inner-city areas. In the midst of an area of near-derelication, young couples and single professionals are buying homes of their own. Two years ago this would have been inconceivable as the neighbouring Toxteth flared into riot. The resulting devastation spurred government into action: breathing life back into decaying cities became a constant theme for Michael Heseltine, then Environ-ment Secretary. Yet there has been little evidence since that anyone really cares about the inner cities or that big business is prepared to put money in place of platinudes.

Myrtle Gardens, a council com-plex of more than 300 flats in sight of the Liver birds and the new Roman Catholic cathedral spire, shows exactly what can be done by the private sector if it puts its mind to it and does not mind making less than a huge profit. The complex has been renamed Minister Court and the leading housebuilder, Barratt Developments, using its subsidiary Barratts Urban Renewal, is almost halfway through a refurbishment programme to turn the abandoned and vandalized series of buildings into smart inner-city apartments.
It is hard to imagine decaying close to achieving what many considered impossible. The company has produced some attractive flats and is now selling them. At £12,950 and £16,950, the first phase of 41 flats sold within 48 hours. Another 83 have also been snapped up quickly.

Security has obviously been a big consideration with the mid-1930s flats so they have a 24-hour porter service operating from a gatchouse and the normal telephone entry system at every main entrance to the buildings.

The managing director of Barratt Urban Renewal (Northern), Alan Gladwin, claims the company is making little profit from the scheme Mr Gladwin, who has been a builder all his working life, assumes the appearance of a bornagain crusader taking the private sector into places it has not been for more than 50 years, a role not entirely at ease with the Barratt company image of large profits.

He wants to tackle more projects in Liverpool such as the one he has recently embarked upon in the Mersey suburb of Hailwood, in this case a terrace of double maisonettes acquired from the council. His first

Directly across the road is a before building and the construct is startling. Gone is the drab, grey rendering and in its place colourful rendering and in its place colournal brick and tiling which stamps "owner-occupier" over the whole complex. Here buyers can acquire four-bedroom homes covering more than 1,000 sq ft for less than £20,000, compared with a new-built version for between £30,000 and £35,000 £35,000.

Barratts has shown what can be done with the least-promising of projects and there are other examples in city centres. In Edinburgh the council has decided to sell off as many as 700 of its stock to the private sector on the West Pilton Estate in an attempt to revitalize a decaying area. Half the estate is boarded up and vacant. Existing tenants, however, believe the council is admitting defeat by selling houses to the private sector.

Some councils, however, are vehemently against any moves to wholesale privatization of their stock. While they go along with the Government's Right to Buy schemes they prefer build-for-sale programmes rather than donating land to private building companies.

The City of Wakefield Metropolitan District Council is adopting a pragmatic approach to home-ownership. Apart from its pro-gramme of council house sales, which has reached 3,000, the council had started its own development projects. They have reached only an experimental stage and the first scheme, a small group of two-bedroom bungalows, has already been released and bought by local buyers. Wakefield's housing information officer Peter Cooper, says the council has a long tradition of building for sale although this latest move is an attempt to take on the private sector face to face. Though the houses are not cheap, about £24,000 each, the council believes they have been of better quality and roomier than would be attempted by house-building com-

There is nevertheless an uncas feeling in some quarters that local authorities should leave building for sale to private companies and concentrate on letting. Generally the argument revolves around creating more jobs and boosting the economy. But Peter Cooper says Waterfield's Normanton project provides work for the council's own staff, such as architects and builders.

1903-1983: Terrifying thoroughfares abhorred by all travellers to France to France

The costermongers of Lon-don's east end are less of a traffic hazard today than they were in 1903, and the unhappy union between wooden pavements and macadam strips near Brent Bridge has been long dissolved together with the bridge itself (Michael Horspell writes).

But London's road network is just as inefficient today as it was 80 years ago, with frustrations of a difficult kind reducing the speed of traffic to marathon runner

A special test by the Royal Automobile Club along some of the capital's main roads has shown that motorists face as many difficulties now as the RAC reported their prede-cessors did in 1903.

In that year club officials escorted members of the Royal Commission on London Traffic in horseless carriages on a 32mile route across London. The jaunt was followed by a report in the club's journal of inadequate roads, congestion and long delays.

The report said that an offer has been made by the RAC "to place motor cars at the disposal of the commissioners, in the belief that some personal knowledge of the main roads of London would probably convey to the commissioners a keener appreciation of the great need for wider and better roads.

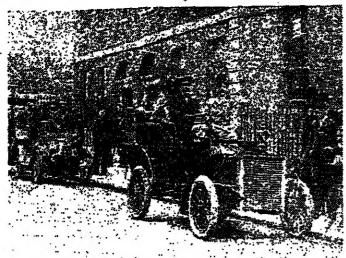

The report added: "It was pointed out that at the present moment no facilities exist for building new trunk reads to relieve the traffic on the few existing main roads.

The Times has ventured along the route the commissioners took and, like the RAC which tried it a few days ago, clocked up an average speed of under 14 mph.

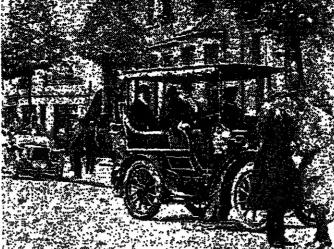

The journey started at Brentford and ended at the Bank in the City, taking in Ealing, Willesden, Paddington, Mayfair, Bloomsbury, King's Walthamstow, Stratford

In Breatford, cyclists were frequently the speedlest travel-lers. At Ealing Common traffic was compressed like thick liquid passing through a scierotic artery. Immobile for 10 minutes at the Edgware Road junction with Harrow Road, one jam led to another until the journey was completed in just under two and a half

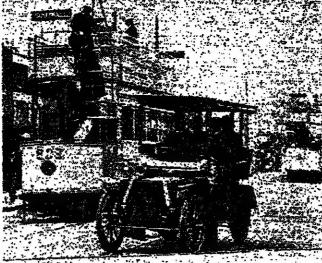

Mr Tony Lee, the RAC's director of public affairs, commented: "It is about time that thousands of motorists and drivers of freight transport were relieved of the deplorable difficulties they face." don's road network demanded a comprehensive reappraisal, he added. Just as it did in 1903.

for aiding Barbie

Continued from page 1... Americans were deeply con-cerned Barbie would return to the British if they stopped using

him. "The revelation of Barhie's connexion to CIC as an informant would have been a serious blow to CIC's prestige in the eves of the British," according to a secret CIC memorandum dated early 1948. Barbie, now agen 69, is in a French prison awaiting trial: While head of the Gestapo in Lyons from 1942 to 1944 he is alleged to have ordered the murder of 4,000 French Jews and to have deported 7,500 others to Nazi concentration camps. He is also said to have been responsible for the death of Jean Moulin, a French resistance hero.

Despite the conclusion that responsible officials of the Army interfered with the lawful and proper administration of justice", the report says there are no grounds under American law for criminal action to be taken against anyone involved.
Under the US statute of limitations an indictment must be brought within five years after commission of an offence. It is 33 years since Barbic escaped to Bolivia and 11 years since France managed to obtain positive information of his presence there.

The report also defends the original recruitment of Barbic by the Americans on the grounds that his alleged involvement in war crimes did not become widely known until two years after he started working for them.

"It is important to realize that Klaus Barbie is far more notorious today than he ever was, except in Lyons, during or immediately after the war," the report states. The Americans decided to recruit him because of his counter-intelligence expertise and his strong anti-communist sentiments.

The report notes that both the British and French intelligence services also made use of former Nazis as informants.

"It must also be said that no other nation in occupied Germany - France, Great Britain or the Soviet Union - is in any position to criticize the decision to use Klaus Barbie now that the US Covernment has revesled the facts behind that use," the report concludes.

The recommendation apologize to France met with stiff resistance from some State Department officials, which was responsible for a delay of several days in the report's publication.
